300,000 GEORGIANS EXPECTED TO CAST BALLOTS IN FIRST OFF-YEAR GENERAL ELECTION TOMORROW

GUNS BARK AGAIN ON STEEL FRONT; PICKETS IN CLASH

100 Shots Fired as Republic Workers Endeavor to Crash Union Lines at Canton (Ohio) Plant; Three Are Successful.

F.D.R. INTERVENTION IS ASKED BY SWOC

300 Lumberjacks Repudiate Leaders' Vote To End Strike; UAWA Claim Gains at Factories

By the Associated Press.
Gunfire broke out again yesterday on the steel strike front—this time at Canton, Ohio.

Police Captain John McDonald, of Canton, estimated 100 shots were exchanged between pickets and six men who attempted to enter the Republic Steel Corporation's Canton plant, two hours before dawn. No one was hit. Three of the men succeeded in getting into the plant. The other three disappeared in the darkness.

The burst of gunshots preceded a mass meeting of striking steel workers called by the CIO Steel Workers' Organizing Committee for another show of strength against the three independent producers—the Republic Steel Corporation, the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, and the Inland Steel Corporation, all of which have taken a stand against signing contracts to bargain with the forces of John L. Lewis, head of the Committee of Industrial Organization.

Ask F. D. R. Intervention.
A strikers' grievance committee, composed of 200 representatives of all SWOC lodges in the Calumet region, met at Gary, Ind., and drew up a telegram, which was sent to President Roosevelt. It appealed to the President to take immediate action to bring the steel strike to a peaceful end by having a joint wage agreement written and signed by the steel corporations and the SWOC.

Ford Campaign Continues.
In the automotive industry of America claimed at Detroit that all the employees of some of Henry Ford's motor company plants had already signed union membership cards. The claim was made by Homer Martin, UAWA president. He did not, however, name the plants. Neither did the union claim to have won its goal of organizing a majority of the employees of the big Rouge plant of the Ford company in Dearborn, Michigan.

Atlanta Beauty Wins Air Carnival Title

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 6.—Loyce York, "Miss Atlanta" beauty winner of 1936, Saturday night added the title of "Miss Aviation, 1937," to her laurels at the seventh annual Aviation Carnival sponsored by the Birmingham Aero Club. Annie Louise Swain, "Miss Tuscaloosa," was runner-up.

Miss York will receive a plane trip to New York in addition to the title and Miss Swain won a plane trip to Miami. The judges were star aviators and aviators appearing on the carnival program. They unanimously voted Miss York winner of the aviation beauty title.

Miss York also will go to Atlantic City in September, representing the entire aviation industry. A crowd estimated at nearly 100,000 attended the carnival.

The judges in the beauty contest were Captain Alex Papan, Rumanian army officer; Major L. Parker, TWA pilot; Captain Len Fovey, commander of the Cuban aviation corps; Captain Frank Hawks and Major H. L. Badham, of Birmingham, Ala., national guard officer.

Young Refugees Forget Horror of War in Dance

Far from their homes in besieged Bilbao, these Basque children dance and play happily in London. Four hundred tiny refugees from the Spanish Civil War are being cared for by the Salvation Army there while their elders kill each other. Children have been quartered in many nations.

'I HELPED CHURCH, DUKE'S VICAR SAYS

Jardine Explains He 'Restored Faith of Many in God' in Marriage.

DARLINGTON, England, June 6.—(UP)—The Rev. Robert Anderson Jardine tonight told his parishioners in a sermon his defiant decision to marry the Duke and Duchess of Windsor has "restored the faith of many in God and the church."

The round-shouldered vicar, known in Yorkshire's working class districts as "the poor man's parson," said both the Church of England hierarchy headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the government "certainly will regret their action."

He referred to the church's ostracism of the wedding and the government's refusal to allow any members of the royal family or persons in British public life to witness the culmination of "the world's greatest romance."

"I believe," the vicar told more than 500 persons who crowded into St. Paul's church for the eagerly-awaited Sunday night sermon, "that I have saved the government and church of this country from inevitable regrets in the years to come."

"They would not authorize a religious ceremony for his royal highness, and it is sure that they certainly will regret their action."

"Through my simple action the faith of many has been restored in God and the church."

Rev. Jardine, in his sermon tonight, spoke as though he had no fear of punishment at the hands of his ecclesiastical superiors.

He said that all through the ages the hand of Divine Providence could be traced.

"In my case," he said, "in marrying the Duke of Windsor the hand of God began to move slowly in the form of a little scrap of paper which I have here in my hand. It is a newspaper clipping."

280 Emory Students To Graduate In Commencement Exercise Today

Bishop Flint To Deliver Address; Frazer Preaches Baccalaureate.

Emory University's 97th commencement season will come to a close at 10:30 o'clock this morning with the delivery of the commencement address by Bishop Flint of the Montgomery (Ala.) district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered yesterday morning at Glenn Memorial church by Dr. John William Frazer, presiding elder of the Montgomery (Ala.) district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"Believe Your Beliefs."

"Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts; but don't believe your doubts and doubt your beliefs," was the advice given the graduating class by Dr. Frazer in his commencement sermon yesterday. He added that "you may

Flown Over U. S. To Save Boy, 12, Cap Wrong Type

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—(AP)—An airplane brought a small lead pencil cap across the continent from New York today on a flight in an effort to save a 12-year-old boy's life. But the cap was of the wrong type.

Andrew Blakeley Jr., swallowed the cap of his pencil while in school at Van Nuys last Thursday. It passed down his windpipe into his right lung. Surgeons tried to remove it by means of a bronchoscope and failed. They said they needed a similar cap so that they might fashion an instrument that would screw into the imprisoned cap.

Efforts to find a similar cap here failed. The boy's plight was broadcast on a national chain hookup. New York police heard it and began a search of book stores there. They found one. An airplane was held 10 minutes at Newark, N. J., while a motorcycle messenger rushed the cap to the airport.

The cap was turned over to surgeons in charge of the boy's case.

4 Children Drowned In Clearwater Surf

CLEARWATER, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—Four children were drowned while bathing at Clearwater Beach today, to bring a tragic end to a Sunday outing of two Tampa families.

The victims, as reported by Clearwater police, were: Paul Boatwright, 12; his sister, Betty Joe, 7; Arline Palmer, about 12, and Dale Chase, about 11, all of Tampa.

Mrs. Edna Boatwright, mother of two of the children, was in a critical condition in a hospital after being rescued by her husband, G. M. Boatwright.

Rescued also were Ruth Boatwright, 16, and Mabel Scarborough, 14, who were pulled out of the water by Emma Boatwright, 17. The victims were caught in a swift-running undertow. The bodies had not been recovered late tonight.

OTTO SEES REBELS PUSH ON BASQUES

Austrian Pretender at Front as Mola's Successor Renews Campaign.

WITH THE INSURGENTS ON THE BILBAO FRONT, June 6.—(AP)—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, claimant of the vacant throne of Austria, was an eye witness today of the resumption of the Spanish Insurgents' drive against long-besieged Bilbao.

From a hill top near the front southeast of Bilbao the 24-year-old archduke watched insurgent artillery and airplanes showering shells and bombs on the Basque lines near Lemona, seven miles from the Basque capital.

It was disclosed the Austrian pretender had reached Spain four days ago to visit his uncle, 32-year-old Prince Gaetan, of Bourbon-Parma, recently wounded while fighting in the insurgent ranks.

Another uncle, Prince Xavier of Bourbon-Parma, accompanied Otto on his tour of the front. Gaetan and Xavier are brothers of Otto's mother, the former Empress Zita, who was a princess of Bourbon-Parma.

Is Keenly Interested.
Otto watched the bombardment with keen interest.

It was the opening phase of a fresh push launched by General Fidel Davilla, who succeeded to command of the insurgent northern armies Thursday when General Emilio Mola was killed in an airplane crash.

Otto saw a fleet of 24 bombers accompanied by numerous pursuit planes drop at least 400 bombs on the hills beyond Lemona, while the insurgent batteries farther back shattered defense positions with a bombardment lasting several hours.

Prince Gaetan was wounded while fighting with a unit of Spanish Requettes who had known him only as "Gae" until he was identified in a military hospital. He is now recuperating at San Sebastian.

Nonpolitical Tour.
Archduke Otto, it was explained, is merely visiting a few hospitals and towns in this region, which he knew in boyhood, and his tour has no political significance.

The insurgent offensive, suspended in a stunned manner after the battle of May 31, was renewed today.

Stable Fire Kills Two, Incinerates 60 Horses

OMAHA, Neb., June 6.—(UP)—Two men were burned to death, five seriously injured, and about 60 valuable race, polo, and show horses were destroyed today when fire swept the main stable at the Ak-Sar-Ben race track here at a loss estimated at more than $200,000.

The dead were identified as W. T. Lochlear, treasurer for Reynolds Brothers stable, and Ed Kelly, a trainer, of Lincoln, Neb. Several other persons were given first aid for burns suffered as they fought to save 156 rearing, plunging horses from the flames which converted the huge barn into a torch within a few minutes after the fire was first seen.

WRATHFUL NAZIS ARREST 11 PRIESTS FOR CHURCH REPLY

Catholic Denial of Propaganda Minister's Accusations of Gross Immorality Brings Immediate Government Reprisal.

WORLD WAR HERO IS AMONG VICTIMS

Statement Read From All Berlin Pulpits Points Out Only One in Every 500 Monks Is Charged.

BERLIN, June 6.—(UP)—An attempt by the German Catholic church to defend itself against charges of widespread immorality among priests and monks brought swift Nazi reprisal tonight when 11 monks were arrested.

The arrests, all in Munich, were announced a few hours after all Catholic priests in the Berlin diocese read from their pulpits a statement stating Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' assertion that immorality is "rampant" in the church's ranks.

The statement said that, out of 21,461 Catholic priests in Germany, only 41 had been accused of sexual offenses and 21 of these already were under sentence.

War Hero Jailed.
The 11 new arrests, supposedly on immorality charges, included Father Rupert Mayer, one of Munich's best known churchmen, who served with the German army throughout the World War.

For the past month, it was disclosed, he has been forbidden by Nazi authorities to preach from his pulpit.

The statement read from the pulpits in answer to Goebbels' fiery speech before a Nazi mass meeting in Deutschland Halle on May 28 when he replied to an anti-Nazi speech made in Chicago by George Cardinal Mundelein.

The Chicago archbishop, who called Chancellor Adolf Hitler "an Austrian paperhanger and a damned poor one at that," also referred to Goebbels as Hitler's "groomed minister of propaganda" because of the charges against German Catholic leaders.

Statistics Cited.
Today's Catholic reply said: "In Germany today there are more than 100,000 lay brothers of the Catholic church. How many of them have been accused of sexual offenses we are not aware."

As regards the priests, however, information from all Catholic dioceses indicates that of 21,461 only 41 have been accused of sexual offenses.

HITLER SAYS REICH WON'T START WAR

Der Fuehrer Reveals Policy on Spain to 150,000 Bavarian Followers.

REGENSBURG, Bavaria, June 6.—(UP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler tonight told a mass meeting of 150,000 Bavarian Nazis that, despite recent events in Spain, Germany has no intention of starting a war "either today, tomorrow or day after tomorrow."

Der Fuehrer's speech before the Bavarian mass meeting, celebrating the Nazi party's organization in the east Bavarian district, was his first public statement on the grave complications in Spain that brought all Europe to the brink of open war a week ago.

He shouted a bold defense of the destruction of the Spanish Loyalist seaport of Almeria by German warships—Germany's vengeance for the bombing of her "pocket battleship" Deutschland at Ivozia in the Balearic islands.

Won't Be Insulted.
"Germany will not suffer to be insulted or attacked," he said. "If someone thinks he may throw bombs on our ships then we shall show him that we do not stand for such things."

"I read in the foreign newspapers that the bombing of Almeria damaged our reputation."

"I want to say this; people associating with notorious criminals are not qualified to be judges of our reputation."

Pioneer Atlanta Leader, John C. Hallman, Succumbs

Confederate Hero, Civic Developer and Business Builder Was 93.

John C. Hallman, Atlanta's beloved "grand old man," a leading figure in the development of this city since Atlanta began to rise from the ashes of war's desolation, died at about 6:15 o'clock last night.

The end came quietly, with his son, Earnest G. Hallman, and his daughter, Mrs. William P. Hill, at the bedside in Emory University hospital.

Another son, Henderson Hallman, was ill at the family home at 499 West Peachtree street, where Mr. Hallman had lived for almost 50 years.

Near 94th Birthday.
Mr. Hallman would have marked his 94th birthday anniversary in September. He was admitted to the hospital last Thursday, but until that time had been in good health.

He held the distinction of being the city's oldest voter, oldest telephone subscriber, oldest director of both the Georgia Power Company and the Atlanta Title & Trust Company, and oldest subscriber to The Constitution.

He retired from active business affairs in 1917, after many years of effort in behalf of his city and state.

Born in North Carolina.
Mr. Hallman, a familiar and popular figure in the streets of Atlanta since 1868, with his close-clipped white mustache in contrast with the ruddy glow of his complexion, was born September 28, 1843, in an old-fashioned home facing the courthouse square in Shelby, N. C.

His parents were George Washington Hallman and Margaret Bailey Hallman.

He and his father were living in Cumming, Ga., when the War Between the States was declared.

Just over 17 years of age, Mr. Hallman enlisted with the Confederate army. He served with Company E of the Fourteenth Georgia regiment, in Wilcox's division, known as the Stonewall Jackson and A. P. Hill corps.

Wounded at Bloody Angle.
He never missed a roll call in 27 months, and at Bloody Angle, during the battle raging around Spotsylvania, he was so severely

NORTH POLE PLANE IS FORCED DOWN Fate of Seven Aboard Ill-Fated Plane Unknown; Ship Buried in Snow.

One of Four Ships Lands on Jagged Ice Floe on Its Return to Moscow.

MOSCOW, June 6.—(UP)—Pilot Anatoly Alexeev and the crew of his Arctic exploration airplane today were forced down on a jagged ice floe, somewhere between the North Pole and Rudolf Island, when their four-motor ship ran out of fuel.

Three other planes of the Soviet expedition arrived safely at their Rudolf Island base, 560 miles from the pole, and reported to Moscow that Alexeev had made a safe landing although they were unaware of exact position.

The planes left behind them at the desolate polar camp four men who will spend the long, almost constantly dark winter there—collecting weather and meteorological data to aid in establishment of a polar airplane route from Moscow to San Francisco.

It was not indicated here how many men were aboard Alexeev's ship.

The planes which arrived at Rudolf Island were piloted by M. V. Vodopianov, the expedition's aerial pathfinder, who carried with him the chief of the polar party; Professor Otto J. Schmidt; Vasily Molokov, and I. P. Mazuruk.

Mazuruk, marooned from the rest of the party since May 26

26 AMENDMENTS IN RIVERS PROGRAM HOLD SPOTLIGHT

Governor Cites Need of Ratification To Round Out State Services to the Aged and Afflicted; Points to Loss of Funds.

REPEAL QUESTION VIES FOR INTEREST

30-Year-Old Bone-Dry Law Up for Second Vote in Two Years; Factions Predict Polls Victory.

Upwards of 300,000 voters of the more than 500,000 eligible to cast ballots are expected to go to the polls in tomorrow's first off-year general election, it was estimated last night as reports reaching Atlanta indicated a last-minute increased stimulation of interest in the 26 amendments to be voted on with the prohibition repeal issue remaining spirited.

Although chief interest centered in the campaign for and against the amendments, the repeal of the 30-year-old bone dry law shared the spotlight with social security, homestead exemptions, the classification tax proposal and other minor matters with both repeals and prohibitionists claiming victory.

The repeal campaign, much warmer than conducted two years ago, came to an end Saturday and there were only brief statements from the contending forces yesterday.

Rivers' Final Appeal.
Meanwhile, Governor Rivers in a final appeal for support of the amendments emphasized that the state will lose $3,500,000 annually if the social security program, comprised in the first two amendments on the ballot, is not ratified.

The governor declared that this amount is being paid into the federal treasury by the employers of Georgia and will not be returned until Georgia begins its participation in the Roosevelt program.

"It will not cost the people of Georgia an additional dollar to join in this program, yet we will lose every cent we are now paying unless the first two amendments on Tuesday are ratified," the chief executive said.

Opposition Blast.
The Governor's statement, together with one from Charles S. Reid, of Atlanta, chairman of the state Democratic executive committee, wound up the campaign in support of the amendments. The opposition, led by former Governor Talmadge, will complete its argument against the program with a radio speech by Talmadge over station WSB at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The state chairman's statement was brief and merely called attention to the fact that the first amendments on the ballot comprise the Democratic party's platform and point to the necessity for the amendments in order that the platform may be carried into reality.

Governor Rivers has remained neutral in the repeal fight and has confined his efforts chiefly to the amendments, which comprise the platform of the Democratic platform.

Rivers' Statement.
His statement yesterday followed: "On the eve of the general election opponents to the program of progress offered the people by the Democratic party in Georgia are seeking to spread the propaganda that ratification of the social security amendments, which provide

ITALY PLANS 2 SHIPS UNLESS ROOSEVELT CALLS ARMS PARLEY

Mussolini Approves Blueprints for 35,000-Ton Battleships.

ROME, June 6.—(UP)—Italy is contemplating construction of two more 35,000-ton battleships immediately unless President Roosevelt takes the initiative in convening a world arms limitation conference, it was reported reliably tonight.

Plans for the new battleships, increasing Italy's might in the Mediterranean trouble zone, have just been completed and approved by Premier Benito Mussolini, the United Press was informed.

Il Duce, angered by the bombing of an Italian naval auxiliary ship off Spain, was said to have ordered construction facilities put in readiness.

President Roosevelt, he was said to believe, will make a decision of a disarmament move in "the very near future."

The plans for the two battleships were described as including outstanding improvements over Italy's other two 35,000-ton battleships, the Littoria and Vittorio Veneto, now in the course of construction.

At the same time Italy is rushing to completion a fleet of modern, fast submarines.

Plans 140 Submarines. Mussolini, it was said, is determined to have 140 submarines in commission within a few months. The Italian navy now has nearly 90 undersea fighting craft.

Disclosure of Mussolini's plans came on the eve of the biggest naval review and sea maneuvers in Italian history.

The review will be held between Naples and Gaeta, tomorrow in honor of Marshal Werner Von

'VICTORY' FORECAST FOR FRANCE, BRITAIN

Powers Could Defeat Germany and Italy, Analyst Asserts.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—(AP)—The Foreign Policy Association said today Great Britain and France could defeat Germany and Italy if the Spanish situation led to a European war.

A report written by David H. Popper of the research staff, suggested a frank declaration by the democracies they would stand together against the Fascist states "would be more successful in diminishing the likelihood of a European conflict" than present policies.

"The superior strategic position of Britain and France in the Mediterranean," Popper said, "enables these states, if they will, to inaugurate a policy of firm resistance to the Fascist countries."

"Unless they can win a war in Europe within a relatively short period—a contingency most military experts consider highly unlikely—Germany and Italy will be subjected to the pressure of Anglo-French sea power which still can sweep enemy commerce from the outer oceans."

Der Fuehrer said that European disarmament was possible providing "the procedure is reversed this time."

"We have become suspicious, and the others must disarm first. But if the others desire to dispel this suspicion they can easily do so by giving the example and disarming."

U. S. Judge Landis Fines Standard $29,240,000 on 'Public Opinion'

28 of 46 States Had Outlawed All Trusts Possessing Monopolistic Powers; 'Tainted' Money Questioned.

This is the twelfth chapter in a series of daily installments which are an authentic chronicle of Mr. Rockefeller's life and career.

By JOHN K. WINKLER.

(Copyright 1937, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

The rebate action was docketed "Government vs. Standard Oil Company of Indiana."

Properly, it could have been labeled "People of the United States vs. John D. Rockefeller."

To the man in the street John D. was a horned creature, an ogre, a personification of corporate greed. It was the spectacular era of the muckraker, the "big stick" and the trust-buster. John D. felt that he was being butchered to make a Roman holiday.

So effectively had the sins of Rockefeller and Standard Oil been shouted to the world that 28 of the 46 states had literally outlawed all trusts possessing monopolistic power. Ten of the states imposed fines. The others threatened imprisonment as well. Under a then recent Texas law, a man could be imprisoned for 10 years merely for selling a gallon of Standard oil.

Ethics Debated. For months a thunderous controversy raged over the question of "tainted" money. School pupils debated Rockefeller ethics, publicists issued lengthy statements, vaudeville comedians cracked jokes. "Sure John D.'s money is tainted—taint for you and taint for me!"

The case against Standard Oil of Indiana was tried in Chicago before Federal Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, now professional baseball's one-man court of final appeal. Landis imposed upon the trust an unparalleled, almost unthinkable fine of $29,240,000.

The penalty, based more upon public opinion than upon law, did not stand. But the decision jolted (and chastened) the entire corporate world.

simple ceremony. I did perform it. It was a simple ceremony and all the powers could not have stopped it. I had been accomplished by God."

"I did not seek publicity, as you gentlemen of the press, who are here now, know very well."

After the sermon the vicar left for Letchworth to spend a few days with his son-in-law.

J. W. Wanger, a member of the parish, suggested that the vicar's flock organize a $25,000 fund as his tribute to him. Henry Pope, lay reader of St. Paul's, offered to act as treasurer.

280 WILL GRADUATE FROM EMORY TODAY

Dr. Frazer used as his text the Biblical quotation, "Other men labored, and ye are entered into their labors." Discussing the appropriateness of this text, he told of the enriching labors of the past generations, which places upon the present graduates the obligation to build a nobler future.

"The past is not dead," declared Dr. Frazer. "We walk in the afterglow of mighty suns that have set. We hear the echo of great hours that have struck."

Examples of Heritage.

Showing how the past thrusts itself into the future, the speaker gave examples of the political heritage, the great literature of early writers, geometry that was formulated by Euclid, present-day use of so-called "dead languages" and the vitality of John Wesley and other religious leaders. He then praised the service rendered by Bishop Warren A. Candier, former president of Emory.

"The splendid achievements of the past, however, do not mean that the essential work of the world has been done," Dr. Frazer declared. "Every generation has a new world to conquer, every graduating class marches to a new battlefield."

Imperative Tasks.

Young people of today were described by the speaker as being confronted with the imperative tasks of creating peace on earth and good will among men, developing a nobler modern literature and moving forward in a new-found religious freedom.

"Let me beseech you to keep the mental attitude of students," he told the graduates, "for life is a great university where one matriculates never to be graduated, where seniors do not receive diplomas and where the commencement day is postponed indefinitely."

Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of the university, will conclude the commencement exercises with conferring of degrees.

Times Best in History, Candier Tells Seniors

STATESBORO, Ga., June 6.—(AP)—Bishop Warren A. Candier, of Atlanta, declared here today that "these are the best times America has ever known and America must be a Christian nation or have no religion at all."

Bishop Candier delivered the baccalaureate sermon for the South Georgia Teachers' College graduating class.

He said Christianity is more alive today than ever and scoffed detractors.

"Christianity," he said, "gives fatherhood of God, brotherhood of man, purity of soul and immortality. What more could we ask?"

The bishop advised the graduating class to "give this religion of Jesus Christ a place in your teaching, in your personal life and in your culture."

DUKE AND WALLY VIE IN DOMESTIC ARTS

Edward Dons Leather Breeches and Sprinkles Garden Flowers.

NOETSCH, Austria, June 6.—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor enjoyed the first Sunday of his married life in country-gentleman fashion today.

Attired in Tyrolean leather breeches, white hose and short-sleeved shirt, the former British sovereign watered flowers in the garden in the morning, surveyed the tennis court and looked for grass he might mow.

The Duchess supervised preparation of an Austrian dinner. Later they sat together on the beflowered terrace at old Waserleuburg castle, their honeymoon home.

The Duchess, wearing a peasant frock, listened to her husband as he read some of the hundreds of telegrams they received on their June 3 wedding day. They have opened only a few.

Then the Duke and Duchess called for beer—an Austrian way of beating the heat at this time of the year.

Second place went to President Roosevelt; third, to the Duke of Windsor.

rival at Nairobi, she and her party of a dozen others will set out on the same trail that H. M. Stanley, a pioneer among globe-trotting reporters, took March 21, 1871, in search of the missionary, David Livingstone.

Mrs. Johnson, who with her husband made seven or eight month pictures of jungle life in Africa and Borneo, will "shoot" scenes of the trails and camps that Stanley and Livingstone used.

The pictures will be used as a background for a film story of the adventure that made Livingstone and Stanley, the Lindberghs and Byrds to the newspaper readers of their day.

Make Hair Grow while the sun shines

"It is a well known phenomenon that in the summer the growth of hair is morerapid," says Dr. Arnold Lorand, Vienna Dermatologist.

THAT Hair grows faster in the summer than at any other season is an established scientific fact. You can take advantage of this seasonal peculiarity by starting Thomas' hair and scalp treatment at once.

Your hair will respond more quickly to this famous proved method of treatment now than at any other time. Within an unusually short time your dandruff will disappear, hairfall will stop, and new hair will actually be visible on the thin and bald spots. Call at the Thomas' office and talk your problem over with the specialist in charge. He will gladly examine your scalp without charge or obligation and frankly tell you what Thomas' treatment can do for you.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN FOUND STRANGLER; SUICIDE INDICATED

Body Found Near Fairburn;
Head Suspended Only Foot
From Ground.

The body of an unidentified man, strangled to death with his own belt, was found at about 9 o'clock yesterday morning in a patch of woods about a mile from Fairburn on the highway to Fayetteville. His head was suspended only about a foot from the ground, with the belt looped over a limb of a small tree.

Discovery of the body was made by L. V. Benefield, owner of the land. Mr. Benefield told a coroner's jury yesterday afternoon the stranger came to his door Wednesday and said he was tired and sleepy and wanted to lie down in the nearby pine thicket. Mr. Benefield gave him permission and said yesterday he did not think about the man again until he found him dead. The man apparently had been dead since Wednesday or Thursday.

The coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicidal death by strangling. Mr. Benefield said the man told him Wednesday he was from Cornelia. Investigation at Cornelia yesterday failed to disclose anyone missing. The man was wearing a light shirt, trousers and cap and carried another pair of trousers and another cap in a bundle bearing the name of a Gainesville department store. A bus hat check from Gainesville to Atlanta also was found in his pocket. He was described as being five feet 11 inches tall, weighing 170

Camera Discovers New Star Cluster

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP) A California scientist reported today that a new cluster of giant nebulae, or masses of stars, has been discovered by use of a new wide-angle telescope and camera.

Writing in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, Dr. F. Zwicky of the California Institute of Technology, said that the new cluster, which contains between 300 and 400 of the nebulae, lies in the constellation of Pisces at a distance of approximately 25,000,000 light-years from the earth. A light-year is the distance light travels in a year at a speed of 186,000 miles per second.

The new group is elliptical in shape, he added, the long diameter, which points east and west, being about 4,000,000 light-years in length, and the distance across it about 1,000,000 light-years.

Oath.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., June 6.—(UP)—W. H. Thompson, 83, former United States senator, died today at his home. He had been ill for several years.

Thompson was appointed to the senate May 24, 1933, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Robert B. Howell, of Omaha. He was the oldest man to whom the oath of senator was ever administered. Thompson had been a prominent figure in Nebraska Democratic politics for many years.

SURVEY PROPOSAL FACES ACTION TODAY

Fight Expected Over Appropriation of $6,333 for Government Study.

Council is not expected to act immediately on the proposal to allocate $6,333 as Atlanta's share of a survey of Atlanta and Fulton county governments, it was indicated yesterday as opposing factions lined up prior to discussion of the proposal at city council's meeting today.

The salient point of the opposition was that a recommendation for establishment of a city manager form of government may follow the proposal, and it was thus predicted there would be strong opposition to any immediate city contribution to the fund.

Strong Support. On the other hand, a strong group of council members are supporting the measure. Led by Councilman John A. White, a determined effort will be made to force the issue and make the allocation at once.

A group of Atlanta businessmen, headed by W. Eugene Harrington, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, already has agreed to put up a similar amount for the survey.

Fulton county commissioners also have approved a like allocation by the county, contingent on sanction of the Atlanta appropriation.

The opposition bloc in council may direct that the request for the allocation be referred to the finance committee, where they propose to let it "pickle" indefinitely. Besides the survey allocation, other major issues face council today.

Other Proposals.

These include: 1. Resolution by Alderman Roy E. Callaway authorizing establishment of a committee of five council members to act as a liaison group between the city, county, state and federal governments in widening of Whitehall street. 2. A movement by Alderman I. Gloer Hailey to initiate construction of an underpass on North avenue just behind Sears-Roebuck Company to relieve traffic congestion in that area. Hailey contends the project will cost less than $40,000. 3. Proposal by Callaway to extend provisions of the food handlers' ordinance requiring domestic servants to submit to semi-annual examinations by doctors in a movement to curb spread of contagious disease.

4. Submission of a resolution asking Fulton county to provide $1,500 for purchase of a six-acre tract on which to locate a playground for the Capitol View section of Atlanta.

5. Extension of the lease of the Eastern Air Lines for another 15 years and the Bureau of Air Commerce for another year will be recommended by the parks and aviation committee.

No action is expected on the proposed purchase of fire equipment.

Bug Seekers Plan Annual Beetle Hunt

Japanese beetles, beware! The government will get you if you don't watch out.

The United States Department of Agriculture, bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, announced yesterday that beetle traps will be placed in residential areas within the next few days, remaining 30 days.

The traps are smaller than those used last year, and are made of metal, painted green and white. The traps last year were made of glass.

The traps are to ascertain if the pesky beetle, which annually does great damage, is present in this territory. If infestation is found, the information will be used to guide possible control activities.

BOLL WEEVIL FIGHT STARTED IN STATE

Precautionary Measures Are Taken in Two Counties.

State Entomologist M. S. Yeomans yesterday announced the initiation of two Georgia projects to combat the boll weevil.

Yeomans said there was no danger of boll weevil infestation, but both projects were "precautionary and experimental measures."

In McIntosh county the state entomology department and the federal department of entomology and plant quarantine are conducting cooperative experimental work.

Yeomans said the McIntosh county work was to determine the best poisons to use in boll weevil eradication. Funds for the project were supplied by a recent general assembly appropriation.

The state entomologist said the Lowndes county commissioners with C. E. Hunt as chairman instituted a "wholesale poisoning" of boll weevils. WPA funds are being used.

The state entomology department is sponsoring the Lowndes county work. A. F. Conradi, an entomologist, is in charge of the poisoning which consists principally of spraying large acreages of Sea Island cotton.

Snite, stricken 14 months ago in Peiping while on a world tour with his parents, was taken safely aboard the vessel after completing the first leg of a 10,000-mile journey that will take him back home to Chicago.

'TRICKY' LAW IS SEEN TO END TAX EVASION

RALEIGH, N. C., June 6.—(AP)—Representative Doughton, 73-year-old chairman of the house ways and means committee, predicted today early passage by congress of a "tricky" law to end tax evasion.

The measure, Doughton said in an interview, "will have to be tricky because we're up against a tricky crowd—the most unscrupulous men in the country, who can afford to hire the best lawyers in the world."

PLANES BUCK WINDS TO AID SICK SAILOR

Seaman Rushed to Hospital
From Ship During Storm
at Sea.

BILOXI, Miss., June 6.—(UP)—H. D. Pimberly, 21, of Galveston, Texas, was rushed to a hospital here tonight after two coast guard planes and a cutter had battled wind and rain to take him off the S. S. Pueblo.

Radio messages from the master of the Pueblo summoned coast guard assistance after Pimberly became critically ill off the Louisiana coast today. While first-aid instructions were radioed the Pueblo from the marine hospital at New Orleans, the cutter Legare sped to the Pueblo's location and took the sick seaman off in a small boat.

Bucking strong head winds and a driving rainstorm, Lieutenant J. F. Harding, of the Biloxi base, piloted an amphibian to the Legare when Pimberly's condition grew more critical and took him aboard.

Poor visibility and the driving rain forced Harding, however, to land at the north end of Chandeleur island off Biloxi. He radioed the base here and a second amphibian was dispatched, transferred Pimberly and flew him to the hospital here.

In Electric Service, You Get...

TWICE AS MUCH FOR YOUR MONEY

as you got in 1928

IF you're a woman with a budget to manage—you know, better than anyone else, that prices are up and on the rise. And you know, too, that you can't buy twice as much food, twice as much clothing, or twice as much of almost anything else today as you could buy in 1928, before "depression" became a household word.

But Georgia homes today CAN, and DO, get twice as much electricity for their money as they got in 1928.

Here's the proof—$3.34 a month is the average electric bill paid by homes served by this Company. In 1928, that amount of money would have bought you 41 kilowatt hours of electricity (if you lived in Atlanta, which had the lowest electric rates in Georgia. In other towns, with their higher rates, it would not have bought as much).

But today, $3.34 buys 83 kilowatt hours on the new "inducement" rate, and the same big value for your money is available wherever this Company's lines run—in cities, towns, villages, crossroads settlements and on the farms.

From 41 kilowatt hours in 1928 to 83 kilowatt hours today—more than TWICE AS MUCH for the same amount of money—that is what makes electricity the biggest bargain you can buy.

Into a depression and out of it, whether other prices were coming down or going up, the price of electric service has gone down, down, DOWN!

GEORGIA POWER COMPANY

Food, clothing and the other items you use every day make up the Cost of Living average, as shown in the upper line of this chart. It's 43 per cent HIGHER than before the World War, in 1913. Now, trace the lower line and see the downward trend of electricity prices paid by homes served by this Company in the same period. When you hear arguments in favor of government ownership of the electric industry, remember this chart. Have taxes, postage rates and other government costs gone down, down, DOWN like this?

ATLANTA, GA., JUNE 7, 1937.

NEW DEAL ON THE FARM
John Gunness is an agricultural college graduate who is now manager of a farm owned by an Atlanta businessman. John Gunness has made that farm, a worn-out, soil-eroded, unfertile patch of acreage just a few years ago, a profitable, valuable piece of agricultural property.

The story of John Gunness was told by Ralph McGill in a recent issue of The Constitution. It is a saga of success that should be studied by every youth in Georgia who is today seeking a course in life by which he can live in freedom and plenty and can contribute to the well-being of the state of which he is a unit.

There is a simple formula behind John Gunness' success. He put into practice the new ways of farm operation he learned at the college of agriculture and he added to this the ingredient of hard work. Such a combination provides a sure key to success.

Asked his opinion on the agricultural colleges and their value to the young farmer, Gunness said:

I am afraid too many graduates of agricultural colleges don't really want to farm. And work. They want to wear a necktie most of the time.

Work upon the soil is the first blessing nature bestowed upon all mankind after Adam was expelled from the Garden of Eden. It is still the surest road to happiness. There is none in all the world who can compare with the independent American farmer who wrests a living from his own acres and who sees his field blossom and bear fruit under the efforts of his own strong arm.

There is another secret behind John Gunness' success, a secret hidden unobtrusively in a single paragraph of the McGill story. It read:

John Gunness came there with his charming wife. She likes a farm. She finds freedom there. They were fitted for a difficult but interesting job. They made a good combination.

A man and a woman, standing hand in hand, sharing a mutual love of the land, strong and happy together in freedom. Of such is the happiness and prosperity of all the world.

The days of success upon the farm are not over. Economic conditions may place a heavy handicap upon agriculture. Lands may be impoverished and world prices for products may be low. Yet, by combining tested new methods with a man's love of the land, and applying the magic power of hard work and enthusiasm, the farm today holds forth opportunity for practically everything modern man uses.

Cellulose, of course, has long been important in the commercial world. Cellulose reaches the consumer in many forms, all the way from rayon to high explosives, not to mention that universal cellophane which today seems to provide wrapping for practically everything modern man uses.

Similar development of lignin through the many variations of xylite seems inevitable. The importance of xylite lies not only in its cheapness and adaptability, but in the fact it will utilize a waste product now going entirely to waste. C. P. Winslow, director of the forest products laboratory, states that a million tons of lignin is annually dumped into the rivers and streams as waste from pulp mills, while 15,000,000 tons more is lost in waste wood and sawdust.

The volunteers in Spain may have been around long enough to be naturalized, but what do they say if an examiner asks, "Can you describe our form of government?"

Editorial of the Day

(H. T. McIntosh in the Albany Herald.)

Yes, "there ought to be a law"—a law to prevent the submission of some of the proposed amendments to the constitution of Georgia on which the voters of the state are to pass in the election of June 8.

I am not referring to the amendments of state-wide interest—the amendment to provide for old-age pensions; the one to exempt owner-occupied homes from taxation up to $2,000; the classification of property for taxation amendment; the amendment to give the legislature authority to convene itself under certain circumstances—these and several others are of interest to all Georgia.

But what has the state as a whole to do with "allowing Chatham county to set up a pension system for county employees?" What do the rest of us know about it? What business is it of the rest of us, if the people of Chatham county want to do it and will vote to authorize it?

An amendment allowing Quitman to have a zoning law? And another amendment of the same sort for Dalton? Another for Glynn county? Allowing Dublin to issue refunding bonds? Permission for Richmond county to negotiate temporary loans?

It may or may not be wise for these counties and cities to do what they seek authority to do, but the fact remains that the rest of us know nothing whatever about these purely local matters. And what sense is there in our voting on something we know absolutely nothing about?

For many years Hon. Joe Burgin, of Buena Vista, Marion county, fought to have this Georgia law changed.

Yet all these local matters are passed upon—the authority sought is either granted or denied—by voters who know nothing whatever about the facts. A citizen or subject of a foreign power could vote just as intelligently.

One publicist agrees with Dodd the time is ripening for a Fascist coup, but as to who the man on horseback will be he cannot say. Does he know of a horse?

A boycott of film players has startling possibilities. In our mind's eye we see a picket line with banners, "Harpo Marx—Unfair to Blondes!"

We all think it very brave of Wally to go ahead and marry the fellow, knowing she will have the British government for an in-law.

FOR FULTON'S SCHOOLS
Placed number twenty-one in the list of 28 amendments to be passed upon by Georgia voters tomorrow is one which applies only to Fulton county. It provides authority for the county commissioners to increase the county-wide levy for educational purposes to 1-2 mills, in place of the 1 mill now imposed.

The county school board now levies a 7-1-2 mill tax on all property outside the city limits and for the last several years has levied the 1-mill county-wide tax, which includes the city of Atlanta. The increase asked will amount only to 5 cents on $100 in taxable property.

While the county school system, with an enrollment of more than 20,000 children, has grown rapidly during recent years, the tax values of the rural sections have not kept pace with the increase in enrollment.

The increased numbers of students is attributed to annexation of territory and to the large numbers of Atlantans who are moving their families to residences outside the city limits, while the heads of the families continue their work in the city.

Patrons of the Fulton county schools help to create the wealth of the city through their labor and the spending of their earnings in the city stores. Hundreds of those who live outside the city are large owners of city property which is taxed, of course, by the municipality.

The county school board is faced with the problem of educating one-third of the children on the revenue derived from only 12 per cent of the taxable property. It must, to make this possible, exact a reasonable tax upon the central, city property.

FOR FULTON'S SCHOOLS
Placed number twenty-one in the list of 28 amendments to be passed upon by Georgia voters tomorrow is one which applies only to Fulton county. It provides authority for the county commissioners to increase the county-wide levy for educational purposes to 1-2 mills, in place of the 1 mill now imposed.

The county school board now levies a 7-1-2 mill tax on all property outside the city limits and for the last several years has levied the 1-mill county-wide tax, which includes the city of Atlanta. The increase asked will amount only to 5 cents on $100 in taxable property.

While the county school system, with an enrollment of more than 20,000 children, has grown rapidly during recent years, the tax values of the rural sections have not kept pace with the increase in enrollment.

The increased numbers of students is attributed to annexation of territory and to the large numbers of Atlantans who are moving their families to residences outside the city limits, while the heads of the families continue their work in the city.

Patrons of the Fulton county schools help to create the wealth of the city through their labor and the spending of their earnings in the city stores. Hundreds of those who live outside the city are large owners of city property which is taxed, of course, by the municipality.

The county school board is faced with the problem of educating one-third of the children on the revenue derived from only 12 per cent of the taxable property. It must, to make this possible, exact a reasonable tax upon the central, city property.

During recent years the tendency has been toward equalization of educational opportunity for children of the state.

Approval of Amendment 21 tomorrow means approval of equal educational opportunity for the children of Atlanta proper and for those of the county outside the city limits.

A NEW FOREST PRODUCT
The United States Forest Products laboratory at Madison, Wis., announces development of a new plastic made from what is now a waste product in the lumber and pulp industry. Potential industrial importance of the new plastic is so great the laboratory has already given it a name, calling it "xylite."

Suggested uses for the new plastic include radio cabinets, wall panels, table tops, automobile instrument boards, and dozens of other everyday objects. The cost, it is stated, will be far below that of other plastics now used. The new material may be pressed into forms that can be lathed, sawed, bored and otherwise machined, according to early reports on its adaptability.

The ancestry of "xylite" is interesting. It is made from lignin, which, next to cellulose, is the most abundant and widely distributed organic substance. Cellulose forms the cell walls, the fibers, the structural elements generally of plants and trees. Lignin cements them together.

Cellulose, of course, has long been important in the commercial world. Cellulose reaches the consumer in many forms, all the way from rayon to high explosives, not to mention that universal cellophane which today seems to provide wrapping for practically everything modern man uses.

Similar development of lignin through the many variations of xylite seems inevitable. The importance of xylite lies not only in its cheapness and adaptability, but in the fact it will utilize a waste product now going entirely to waste. C. P. Winslow, director of the forest products laboratory, states that a million tons of lignin is annually dumped into the rivers and streams as waste from pulp mills, while 15,000,000 tons more is lost in waste wood and sawdust.

The volunteers in Spain may have been around long enough to be naturalized, but what do they say if an examiner asks, "Can you describe our form of government?"

Yes, "there ought to be a law"—a law to prevent the submission of some of the proposed amendments to the constitution of Georgia on which the voters of the state are to pass in the election of June 8.

I am not referring to the amendments of state-wide interest—the amendment to provide for old-age pensions; the one to exempt owner-occupied homes from taxation up to $2,000; the classification of property for taxation amendment; the amendment to give the legislature authority to convene itself under certain circumstances—these and several others are of interest to all Georgia.

But what has the state as a whole to do with "allowing Chatham county to set up a pension system for county employees?" What do the rest of us know about it? What business is it of the rest of us, if the people of Chatham county want to do it and will vote to authorize it?

An amendment allowing Quitman to have a zoning law? And another amendment of the same sort for Dalton? Another for Glynn county? Allowing Dublin to issue refunding bonds? Permission for Richmond county to negotiate temporary loans?

It may or may not be wise for these counties and cities to do what they seek authority to do, but the fact remains that the rest of us know nothing whatever about these purely local matters. And what sense is there in our voting on something we know absolutely nothing about?

For many years Hon. Joe Burgin, of Buena Vista, Marion county, fought to have this Georgia law changed.

Yet all these local matters are passed upon—the authority sought is either granted or denied—by voters who know nothing whatever about the facts. A citizen or subject of a foreign power could vote just as intelligently.

One publicist agrees with Dodd the time is ripening for a Fascist coup, but as to who the man on horseback will be he cannot say. Does he know of a horse?

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON.

JOKERY WASHINGTON, June 6.—The house farm bloc has been crowding through the senate farm bill in private, trying to find out what it is all about. The provokers stumbled the other day upon what they thought was an alarming gag. Agriculture Secretary Wallace was summoned to a secret meeting of the house agriculture committee. The door was locked and he was put through what is known in legislative circles as the hoops, meaning a mild congressional form of the third degree.

Nothing was made public about it, and probably nothing will be said officially, but there is reason to believe Mr. Wallace and the legislators agreed the proposed benefit-payment system was slightly lopsided.

In fact, an exceptionally able unofficial reporter thought he heard them agree the corn farmers would get about half of the federal funds and the other half would be split among the wheat, cotton, tobacco and peanut farmers.

You can imagine what effect this had on the cotton legislators from southern states.

DISAFFECTION The disparity undoubtedly will be adjusted before (and if) the bill ever gets out of the committee. For the time being, it has prejudiced the southern bloc against the whole bill, as news of the discovery has been passed around the house by word of mouth. It has increased the likelihood of indefinitely delaying all the legislation except the ever-normal granary portion, which may be lifted out of the bill and passed separately.

The real root of the silent opposition, however, lies in fear of the unconstitutionality of the measure. Some farm members reason this way: No one has questioned the constitutionality of the soil conservation act, under which benefit payments now are being made. The system (they say) is working very well. If this new bill is passed, it surely will be challenged. Why risk it?

Furthermore, the best agricultural authority on the committee (and he is a New Dealer) says the estimated $280,000,000 annual cost of the bill is really only about half of what the total cost will amount to. Mr. Wallace, he says, was unable to furnish the committee even an estimate of the administrative costs of distributing the $280,000,000 of benefit payments.

At any rate, the bill is deeply involved in difficulties and its fate is becoming more and more uncertain.

EFFICIENCY One of President Roosevelt's friends remarked recently that, if the President had fifty Joe Kennedy's, his New Deal would be romping along with half the engine trouble it has developed lately. Mr. Kennedy is a business mechanic, now organizing the maritime commission in the forceful way of a capable business executive, to-wit:

An announcement was made by his commission the other day to the effect that bids for purchase of 28 vessels of its laid-up fleet were too low. Mr. Kennedy called for new bids, not only from Americans, but from any foreigners who would agree not to use the ships to or from U. S. ports.

No explanation was offered, but behind the step was the fact that a Canadian firm bid twice as much for 15 of the 28 ships as any American firm bid for the whole 28. Businessman Kennedy could not see any percentage in letting his idle fleet go for a domestic ship when he might get real money abroad.

When his purpose becomes known, there undoubtedly will be a hue and cry against selling the ships to foreign interests, but the betting is even that Mr. Kennedy will have his way and get his price.

SOFT Senators with a knowledge of the inside on the recent Spanish bomb turmoil are inclined to blame the weakness of the British foreign policy. They are saying (not officially, of course) that London has less influence on the continent now than at any time they can remember.

Strangely, they are inclined to absolve personally Anthony Eden, the British foreign minister. They suspect restraints have been placed upon him by Downing Street, or someone who may own the building at No. 10. But they insist that, if the British could decide which side they want to be on, they could keep the peace in Europe.

British spokesmen refute this talk and suggest this is not the time for anyone to try strong pressure unless he wants to go to war to back it up. The British probably will be ready for that about this time next year.

TREND Old-time congressmen are talking of the growth of Socialism among young Democrats and wondering where it will lead. A midwest member of the house is telling one about a young Democratic attorney for whom he obtained a position with a government project at Knoxville, Tenn., about a year ago. The young attorney dropped in to see his benefactor a few days ago, and announced: "I am no longer a Democrat. I am a Socialist now. All my associates are Socialists."

The congressman suggested that, hereafter, the young man get his endorsement for government position from Norman Thomas and see how many jobs he gets. But that suggestion had no effect. The young man said he would remain a Socialist, patronage or no patronage.

Wanted—A Good Temperance Hotel.
It has been reported that the W. C. T. U., on the occasion of a recent gathering in Washington, was unable to find a hotel for its headquarters, without a bar and no liquor.

Personally, I sympathize deeply. While the absence or presence of cocktail bar or wine list in any hotel I patronize is a matter of supreme indifference, being accustomed to do as I please on such matters anyway it seems a downright shame that the W. C. T. U. should be made unhappy. I am a firm advocate of providing, if possible, for the most perfect happiness of every group. In fact, I believe in nudist camps for nudists, bridge tables for bridge fiends, Angelus temples for Aimee Semple McPhersons and automobile crashes for "Hell Riders."

Though, by no possible stretch of the imagination, can I conceive of such conveniences adding to my own joy in life.

So, by the same token, I believe in temperance hotels for the W. C. T. U.

An Afternoon In London.
Why, I even found a right comfortable temperance hotel in London, where the gutters are supposed to be awash with ale, and have heard of a similar place in Edinburgh, where the natives are reported to use Scotch whisky as a sedative.

On this particular London day my sister and I had arrived about noon for a week's visit. We had wired ahead for room reservations but the popular hotel selected was full, even to the billiard rooms and the lounges, and refused to admit receipt of our wire.

So we started, in a taxicab, to hunt a hotel with a couple of vacant rooms.

Now it is doubtful if there is a modern city with more hotel or rooming house accommodations, of all sorts, than London. Nevertheless, at the end of three hours driving and calling upon scores of scores of hostesses, we were still without a place to lay our heads.

I was contemplating contracting for the taxicab with the week and sleeping in it, when we found a hotel porter with a blessed fund of information.

His own establishment was, naturally, full. But he gave us a list of small places, in the backwater streets, among which he said we might find our resting place.

Fair Enough
By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

John Lewis' NEW YORK, June 6.—From most accounts Democracy counts it seems that John L. Lewis is a fighting altruist whose beetling brows mask the compassion in his eyes and, for the sake of argument, that may be conceded. It doesn't work for a living. That is a rather important constitutional right, and one for which Mr. Lewis has contended with some vigor for many years, and it is no more lightly to be abrogated by a labor leader and a mob than by a soulless corporation and a force of subsidized deputy sheriffs.

Still conceding that Mr. Lewis is working with a heart full of pity for all that faction of the oppressed who accept his leadership, though for them only, the law is careless and dangerous in failing to take precautions against reckless conduct on his part or by some successor come to equal power might have less noble motives.

Labor's Responsibility Mere professions of altruism and the light in an individual's eyes are not sufficient guarantee against the damage that can be wrought by a man with so much might, and, anyway, if labor is to receive protection under the laws labor should be compelled to assume responsibility for its acts and for the fulfillment of formal contracts.

The fact is that the labor leader very often is a dictator maintaining his power by union politics at the expense of democratic procedure, a peculiarity which places the rank and file in the position of the Italian or German citizens who just rock along submitting to discipline. If they dissent they may be denounced as traitors to labor, and if they get too fresh they may be slugged and lose their right to work at all.

I do not contend that this condition is general, although it is by no means rare, but the fact that it is inherent in the present arrangement cannot be denied or justified on any grounds but those of something called loyalty. Again, the great dictators used the same argument. Loyalty is what they say it is.

Union Finances Big Business Union finances are big business involving enormous totals in legitimate dues and assessments as well as tributes levied by the leaders on American citizens, for permission to work at their occupation. These accounts now are matters of public interest, but though employers must open their books to the government, and may be punished for certain activities revealed by their accounts, the labor leader may follow a policy of treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing, and it is immune to rebuke for anything short of personal murder, if that.

A contract is no contract unless it is binding on both sides, and it can't be binding on labor until labor, like every other party to an agreement, stands to lose something for violation.

GOOD MORNING
By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

What a grand and glorious world—green cabbage, spring onions, string beans, golden squash, royal beets, tasty turnips for poltikker, cornbread and buttermilk, chickens ready for pie and fried—and with each berry pie and—and berry pie! And there are mighty few people in Georgia who couldn't have the aforesaid viands if they are willing to work.

Berry pie! Let the thought dwell in your imagination for a moment. The moment I think about berry pie every gland in my mouth and throat leap into action. Dewberries, blackberries, strawberries, raspberries, huckleberries and all the other berries to make the best pies. It doesn't matter whether you have them deep or thin, just so you get enough to color the landscape, they are always good. I like to start the day with berries in my cereal for breakfast, another bowl with some cream for lunch and then for supper one of these grand deep-pan pies, brown crust, butter sauce!

Just as I was ruminating along this line, I was ruminating along with a jar of strawberry jam that the madame had made. I'll keep this jar on my desk for a few days as a decoration, linking its beauty with that of lily, larkspur, rose, etc., and then, ah, then, some morning right soon, when the dew is still fresh on the roses, I hope to spread some of this delicious jam on several of Emma's butter 'em while they are hot, and thank the Lord again for berries and for friends!

Children Won't Learn to Say "Isn't" If Their Parents Say "Ain't"

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Imagine ten ordinary boys at the threshold of their teens sitting in some secluded spot where no adults can see or molest them. They have been told not to smoke, yet one of them produces a pack of cigarettes.

One of the boys is timid, the others robust, bold and adventurous, as normal boys are likely to be.

What happens? The timid boy and one or two others refuse to smoke, each saying in a tone of apology: "Dad told me not to." And the other boys answer in astonished scorn: "Why, you poor sap, he won't know anything about it."

That answer explains much of America. A few of the boys may respect and obey parental law because it is law; the others feel free to do as they please, and see no harm in breaking the law when it forbids something in which they see no evil.

Now imagine the ten boys grown to manhood. They are married and consider themselves good citizens. Again they are together, far from any authority, this time camping in the woods. They and their wives are tempted to pick wild flowers, but one of them says: "Isn't it against the law to pick wild flowers in this state?"

What is the result this time? You know the answer. Two or three, possibly, obey the law because it is law. It is a matter of duty, honor and loyalty. Rules are sacred to them.

The others reason as the boys did: "There's no harm in it; the flowers are doing nobody any good here; and, anyway, there is no agent of the law here to see us."

That is the way most of us feel. If you doubt it, consider your own reaction to traffic laws.

You obey the red light—not because the law requires it, but because the law seems necessary. It isn't law that you respect, but necessity.

You believe in speed laws—for others. But when you are on an open stretch of highway, you see no wrong in breaking the law so long as you are unobserved. You do not respect the law for its own sake, for it doesn't seem reasonable; yet how quickly your foot lifts from the accelerator when you see a motorcycle in your rear-view mirror!

Why do we, as a people, feel no respect for the law, while the English regard it as something sacred? Aren't we the same breed, with the same love of liberty and loyalty and sportsmanship?

The answer is doubtless in the power of example. In childhood we observe that our parents have no respect for law as law, and we copy their attitude as we copy their manners and mode of speech.

ARMY RETIREMENT PLAN.

Editor Constitution: I cannot refrain from differing with you greatly in the matter of retired army men taking government jobs. If the government is going to retire its men and put them back in government positions then why not retire them and allow them to keep on at work in the position at which they are qualified to do? The purpose of "retirement" is to assure old and faithful employees a secure old age and to make room for younger men to come in and take their place.

I am under the impression that the CCC is primarily for the purpose of taking care of our younger men and "make" jobs for people who are more or less unemployed.

It will be a vicious system if the government adopts a policy of putting its retired employees back in government jobs. Then all of us will be clamoring to get government positions with a guaranteed retirement and on retirement secure for ourselves a different and perhaps better place, in some other branch of the government service. Every retired civil service and government employee will feel that it is his privilege to ask for just such a place—who wouldn't?

LOCAL WPA SHARE ORDERED INCREASED

Boost From 16 to 22 Per Cent Has Little Effect Here.

Works progress officials at Washington yesterday announced they would require local sponsors of federal-aid projects to pay about 22 per cent of the cost of relief projects in the fiscal year beginning July 1. State and local officials here, however, declared the new ruling would not have any great effect on local contributions in Georgia.

Localities throughout the United States at present pay an average of 16 per cent of the cost, the national office said, but officials here declared the contributions of municipalities and counties in Georgia on construction projects now average about the 22 per cent which will be required under the new ruling.

On non-manual projects the percentage of the sponsor's payment is less, it was said, with payment usually being made in the form of rentals and furnishing of offices. In this classification, officials here pointed out, payment by localities is likely to be increased.

The opinion was expressed that the request for larger contributions by localities was made as the result of the curtailing of the works relief bill. The new $1,500,000 relief bill is now pending before the senate. However, WPA officials in Washington declared not more than $1,337,000 would be available for WPA work relief, the remainder going to the National Youth Administration, Resettlement Administration and other activities.

Under the new requirements, localities would add about $350,000 throughout the nation to the work relief fund, bringing the total to approximately $1,687,000. State authorities here yesterday were unable to estimate the increase in contributions in Georgia.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

CARBON MONOXIDE IS NOT POISON.

So deadly is carbon monoxide gas that inhalation of only one part in 100 parts of air causes almost instantaneous death, and breathing for a considerable period of air containing only one part of carbon monoxide to 500 parts of air may prove fatal. Breathing atmosphere containing only one part of monoxide to 1,000 parts of air may cause headache, and other symptoms which are likely to be ascribed to almost any other cause than anoxia.

Anoxia means absence of oxygen from the tissues and cells of the body. Anoxemia means absence of oxygen from the blood. This is the explanation of the noxious effects of carbon monoxide gas. The gas itself is colorless, odorless, tasteless, non-irritating to breathe, gives no warning of its presence, and is not in itself poisonous. It merely crowds oxygen out of the blood cells and tissues, because carbon monoxide has a stronger affinity for hemoglobin and so replaces oxygen in the blood.

Chief function of the circulation, it must be remembered, is oxygenation or internal respiration, carrying oxygen to the cells and tissues of the body and carrying carbon dioxide (product of oxidation or combustion) from the cells and tissues back to the lungs to be blown off into the outer atmosphere. The oxygen and carbon dioxide are carried mainly in loose chemical combination with the coloring matter, the hemoglobin in the red corpuscles, though considerable carbon dioxide is carried back from the cells to the lungs in solution in the blood or in combination with other substances than the hemoglobin.

Carbon monoxide has 300 times greater affinity for hemoglobin than oxygen has. For this reason an extremely small amount of carbon monoxide in the air breathed may quickly saturate the hemoglobin and so prevent it from carrying oxygen to the cells of the body. That's how carbon monoxide kills—anoxemia, asphyxia. The carbon monoxide itself does not injure or destroy the cells or tissues, as real poisons do. All of the effects of carbon monoxide gassing, whether immediately fatal or temporarily disabling or chronically weakening effects, are due to deprivation of the oxygen the cells and tissues must have constantly in order to function.

DUMB BELLS

REGISTERED U.S. PATENT OFFICE

WILL YOU BE SURE TO CLOSE THE PORT HOLE WHEN THE TIDE RISES?

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"Wisdom is humble that he knows no more."

Wisdom should be especially humble when it comes to fixing the prices of goods and the wages of labor. To our way of thinking, there is not wisdom enough in all the world or all the history of the world to fix the price of a single loaf of bread or the wage for a single digger's day. Experience has proved nothing if it has not proved that the economic balances involved are so delicate and the economic interests so infinite that the Lord alone, through His principles of competition and of supply and demand, is to be trusted to name the figure.

We agree with Walter Lippman that the technical difficulties of fixing minimum wages satisfactorily are insuperable, that to fix minimum wages means in effect to fix all wages and all prices. Otherwise, all wages will tend to be minimum and all prices to increase as much as or more than all wages.

But is Mr. Lippman right when he makes a distinction between the fixing of minimum wages and the fixing of maximum working hours? Is not the one definitely related to and determinant of the other? And do not the same laws of competition and of supply and demand which must be depended upon for prices and wages need to be depended on for hours, too? The answer, it has always seemed to this column, depends upon an answer to the most fundamental question the machine age has put, a question long debated and never yet settled. That question is: whether science and the machine are decreasing radically the amount of human labor required to do the work of the world.

If there is, indeed, such a thing as progressive technological unemployment, then something very definitely does need to be done to prevent the supply of human labor from exceeding the demand by such increasing portions that, under the supply and demand law, labor will have less and less value and labor's purchasing power, upon which the machine age depends, will be dissipated.

Do the artificialities of machinery justify and require an artificial regulation of the supply of labor through the limitations upon working hours? There are many to say so. The machine age means not less work but more goods they say. More services, more things to be consumed. The increased production of all sorts which machinery makes possible more than offsets the decreased human labor required for each unit of production. Others add that this is true, providing prices are kept down enough to make the increased consumption possible and providing the necessarily social and non-profit nature of some of the new production is accepted.

But still others contend, and with excellent reason, it seems to us, that even though there are factors tending thus to maintain the amount of human labor required for the work of the world, some lessening is not only inevitable but also desirable. Desirable because it gives time for the increased consuming necessary and because one of the very blessings sought through machinery is the blessing of labor-saving, of increased leisure. They point out that in the last 100 years the average working hours have decreased about one-third and that this was a natural result of labor-saving machinery, even though it was brought about either through collective bargaining or social pressure.

We, for one, incline to agree with these people and with Mr. Lippman that there is a great difference between social control of wages and prices and social control of working hours.

36 'Milk Maids' for Kiddie Revue Picked From Pi Pi Club Members

High School Girls To Remind Audiences of the Fluid So Necessary for the Well-Being of Crippled Children.

Popular young Atlanta high school belles—36 of them—who will play milkmaids at the ninth annual Kiddie Revue which opens Friday for a week's fun at the Grand were selected yesterday.

The Kiddie Revue is sponsored by the Atlanta Masonic Club for the benefit of the Scottish Rite

SOLONS SEE DELAY IN 'DESIRED' BILLS

Hold-Over of Some Measures Held Imperative to Permit Adjournment.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—A week of intensive work stretched before congress today as it swung into a drive for an adjournment still far in the future.

President Roosevelt's enumeration of bills which he would prefer to be enacted at this session added to potential controversies, any one of which might last for weeks, if not months.

Several legislators, speaking privately, said some portion of the program would have to be postponed if this session is not to run continuously into the next, beginning in January.

Court Is Major Bar.

Of first importance, as an adjournment obstacle at least, was the President's bill for the reorganization of the supreme court. Bitter oppositionists have threatened to filibuster any compromise proposal to the point of physical exhaustion.

Other items of the list were the establishment of wage and hour standards for interstate industries, anti-tax dodging measures, reorganization of the executive branch of the government, helping farm tenants to become farm owners, conservation of soil, water and power resources and the razing of slums and building of modern low-cost housing.

This list furnished the subject matter for essential portions of the week's program.

Lewis to Testify.

The senate and house labor committees, in joint session will continue their hearings on the wage-hour bill, with John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, as their principal witness.

A majority of the senate judiciary committee, opposed to the court reorganization bill was at work on a report recommending that the senate reject the measure.

A subcommittee of the senate committee on agriculture contemplated a modified farm tenancy bill. Members said it would be completed in a few days.

DEADLOCK PREDICTED ON U. S. SUGAR CONTROL

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—Congressional sugar legislation advocates predicted today a deadlock on new control proposals could be broken if divergent interests agree on what share of the American market each should supply.

A proposal for a permanent control act, introduced three months ago, is stalemate in the house agriculture committee because of a dispute between the Capitol Hill sugar bloc and the administration over what advantages to extend to interests of offshore areas—principally Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Philippines and Cuba.

Scientists 'Set' To Record Sun In Total Eclipse

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(AP)—American scientists, encamped on lonely little Canton island in the mid-Pacific, spent their Sabbath making last-minute adjustments to tons of intricate equipment poised to catch the secrets of the sun in Tuesday's total eclipse.

Radioed word came to the Navy Department and the National Geographic Society headquarters here during the day that the joint expedition of sky-watchers had completed their "set up" to record the longest total eclipse in more than 1,200 years.

At Canton, a dot of coral and sand 5,000 miles southwest of San Francisco where only big, tame rats and hermit crabs keep company with 15 scientists, radio engineers and artists and a group of New Zealand observers, the expedition prepared to view a totality enduring three minutes and 33 seconds.

Meanwhile, scientists from Franklin Institute of Philadelphia and Princeton University were bobbing around in midocean in an anchored observatory near the center of the maximum duration—seven minutes and four seconds. They are 1,500 miles away from nearest land.

A third expedition, the Hayden Planetarium-Grace party from New York city, was encamped on the western coast of Peru in the center of the shadow's path where it will fade away at sunset.

United States Naval Observatory scientists are particularly interested in timing the moment when the edges of the sun and moon appear to meet, a moment of vital importance in checking day-by-day time for the nation and the measurement of the length of the day and the year.

KILLED IN AUTO CRASH.

OIL STRIKE 'CLIMAX' AWAITED IN MEXICO

Today Is Day President Must Make Good on Settlement Statement.

MEXICO CITY, June 6.—President Lazaro Cardenas' bombshell announcement late last night that Mexico's general oil strike would end tomorrow remained without official elucidation tonight.

Leaders of the 18,000 striking oil workers, representatives of the 17 companies affected and officials of the federal labor department all asserted they were ignorant of the procedure the executive proposed to use to end the paralysis of the $400,000,000 industry.

A terse, unqualified bulletin from the palace was issued through the government press bureau late last night.

It read: "The presidency of the republic has given instructions to this department to inform the public that Monday the state of strike in the oil fields and in their dependencies will have been lifted."

The strike was launched May 28.

Workers had demanded pay raises, a 40-hour week, vacations with pay and a pension system, among other concessions, all of which the oil operators said could not be met financially.

While the president's statement served in some measure to calm public alarm over the strike situation, some observers said they wondered if the executive had not risked his prestige in making it.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND CUT IN TWO BY TRAIN

TAMPA, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Elizabeth Dunlop, 27, was found early today on the tracks of the Seaboard Airline railroad near here. It was cut in two at the waist by a Tampa-bound train.

Deputy Sheriff Van Petten said her husband told him Mrs. Dunlop complained of feeling ill last night and walked away from their home, which was near the tracks.

TO THE VOTERS OF FULTON COUNTY:

Tuesday, June 8th, the people of Georgia will vote upon the proposed 26 Constitutional Amendments. Ten of these amendments affect the entire State, (six of these being a part of the Democratic Party platform in Georgia) and sixteen being local in nature. These amendments are part of a program presented by Governor Rivers to the last Legislature—it is a plan that will render a great service to our people. It is a program in keeping with the aims and ideals of President Roosevelt, and is one that will enable Fulton County and the State of Georgia to receive their share of Federal funds.

Ratification of these amendments on June 8th will result in the benefits outlined below:

● You will benefit by the $2,000 Home and Farm Tax Exemption and the $300 Household Tax Exemption.

● You will help the old people, the blind, and the crippled children of the State to get their part of the pension money; and will enable the children of Fulton County and the State to get free school books from the First through the Eleventh grades.

● Creation of a new (52nd) Senatorial District composed of Fulton County only.

● Allow Atlanta to issue refunding bonds and to make temporary loans to retire current debts.

The proposed 26 Constitutional Amendments have received the hearty endorsement of county and city officials. The heads of our county and city governments believe that the ratification of all these amendments will enable the State, County, and City to more effectively carry on a program that will be beneficial to all our people.

Vote and work for the greatest program for humanity in history.

Yours truly,

Walter C. Hendrix

BROOKINGS REPORT URGES LAWMAKERS TO CURB PRESIDENT

Solons Asked To Deny Control Over Quasi-Judicial Agencies.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(UP)—The senate committee studying government reorganization was advised by the Brookings Institution tonight to deny President Roosevelt the additional power he seeks over the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and other regulatory bodies.

The institution, which undertook a study at the request of a senate committee headed by Senator Byrd, Democrat, Virginia, gave two reasons:

1. The independent agencies are in a real sense creators of law rather than mere enforcers. Thus they perform the same functions as congress would if it had time. For this reason they should be regarded as agents of the legislative branch.

2. The President is subject to almost no judicial control. Neither writs of injunction nor mandamus will lie against him. Independent agencies are subjected to strict court control.

The institution proposed reorganization of the Federal Trade Commission to strengthen its functioning by transfers of certain unfair trade practice functions, control over commodity exchanges and power over monopolies and restraint of trade under anti-trust act, to the commission.

Insisting the newer social policies over which the regulatory bodies preside must not be made "the football of politics," the institution added:

"It is conceivable the President might be opposed to the will of congress and consequently might fail to implement the acts of congress (by executive orders) in such a way that their purpose would be fulfilled."

PICKETS, WORKERS BATTLE AT CANTON

States and Canada agreed on demands for a new labor contract. Recognition of the United Automobile Workers as sole bargaining agency was understood to be one of the approved points. Others affect seniority rights, the shop steward system, the union attitude on decentralization of industry, agreements regarding unauthorized strikes, wages and hours.

Under terms of the present contract, new negotiations can begin June 11.

Woodsmen At Work.

Woodsmen's axes will ring out and sawmills will buzz again today in Michigan's northern woods country as striking lumberjacks return to work.

Peace prevailed in the state's upper peninsula last night while the workers, idle since a widespread strike began May 24, began to report back to their logging camps.

Joseph Ashmore, deputy state labor commissioner, said that most of the 6,000 strikers would be back on the job today. The end of the strike came as 300 lumberjacks, apparently representative of striking woodsmen, repudiated two of their arrested leaders and voted at a meeting here yesterday to resume work.

The body was found by a son, Fred, returning from the delivery of morning newspapers.

"Sea Devils" Opens Run
At the Capitol Theater

An exciting story of life in the United States coast guard, "Sea Devils," began a week's engagement yesterday at the Capitol theater, augmented with a splendid stage show presenting a group of clever entertainers.

Victor McLaglen, Donald Woods, Preston Foster and Ida Lupino have principal roles in the feature film.

Stirring rescues, one from a burning ship and the other from a yacht blown ashore in a storm, make this picture one of the most exciting seen in a long time.

There is also much interest in scenes showing how coast guardsmen attempt to demolish a huge iceberg off the Newfoundland coast.

As for the plot, it develops mainly from the romance between Miss Lupino and Foster. McLaglen gives a powerful performance as a hard-bitten chief petty officer, determined that Miss Lupino, his daughter, should marry his shipmate, Woods.

The stage show is "Cavalcade of Stars," presenting a variety show far above the average. Music is furnished by the Six Southern Gentlemen, augmented by Enrico Leide and his Capitolians.

Short subjects complete the program.—P. C. L.

Karpis-Campbell Molls Will Tell Undisclosed Story in Court Today

Two Floridians Go On Trial on Charges of Aiding Racketeer.

MIAMI, Fla., June 6.—(AP)—Alvin Karpis headed behind the bars of waterbound Alcatraz for many months, but this week probably will be told for the first time the inside story of "Old Creepy's" role as a tourist of Florida's Gold Coast.

As did many an honest, weary businessman, Karpis came to Miami in December of 1934 to seek succor from the crime labors which had elevated him to the rank of Public Enemy No. 1. He lured on sunny beaches, saw dog and horse races, visited popular night resorts.

Charged with assisting Karpis during that stay, Joe H. Adams, dog track operator, and Henry (Duke) Randall, one-time parliament clerk, have been called to trial in federal court tomorrow. They have pleaded, in a plea, claiming they had no reason to suspect the man they served was the outlaw.

Federal attorneys scoffed at rumors that Karpis, sentenced to life imprisonment for the William Hamm kidnapping, would be returned to testify.

The girls left behind by Karpis and Harry Campbell when they shot free of a police trap at Atlantic City on January 20, 1935, were here, however, transferred from the federal women's detention house to the county jail to tell their hitherto undisclosed story.

The women, Dolores Delaney and Wynona Burdette, have served nearly three years of their five-year sentences. They spent several hours Saturday shopping, under guard, for their court appearance.

Schmidt reported by radio that Alexeev's plane was last seen, descending rapidly and dropping out of sight beneath heavy cloud banks, at latitude 89.

The planes flew at a height of about 6,000 feet on the 560-mile return flight.

One of the three ships barely had enough gasoline to reach its goal, due to strong head winds.

MISSING AIRLINER IS FOUND IN UTAH

said no bodies were "dug out" immediately.

"The CCC boy told me a part of it was sticking out of the snow on Lake Hardy Ridge, about five miles in the mountains above Alpine, when it was found at 8 o'clock this morning," Vern Healey, of Alpine, told the Associated Press.

Plane Guarded.

Healey said a guard was established at the scene.

"The plane was smashed into a million pieces," Healey said. "The wings were broken off. Pieces were scattered all over the ridge above Lake Hardy. Mail bags were lying around there, torn open."

The ship, a 10-passenger, twin-motored Boeing, disappeared before dawn of last December 15 en route from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City. Aboard were: Pilot S. J. Samson, Co-Pilot William Bogen, Stewardess Gladys Witt and four passengers—Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wolfe, of Chicago; Henry F. Edwards, of Minneapolis; and Carl Christopher, of Dwight, Ill.

Healey told the Associated Press the discovery was made by two Alpine residents—Emery Andrew and Melvin Nevery—who had been searching nearly a month, lured as were scores of others by Western Air's offer of $1,000 reward for the finder. Both Healey said, are married and have families.

Airliner Lost.

The ill-fated airliner left Los Angeles at 11:15 p. m., Pacific standard time, Monday night, December 14. It was due in Utah's mountain-hemmed capital at 4:10 a. m., mountain time, next morning.

But—after a routine radio report from the pilot that he was over Milford, Utah, at 3:27 a. m., December 15—no more was heard. Milford is 180 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

Hours later came reports from early-rising ranchers and villagers of 25 to 40 miles south of Salt Lake City a plane "that sounded as if it were in trouble" struggling through the muck and rain before dawn.

The place where they say they found it is in a terribly rough country," Healey said.

"I doubt if a man could get to it from the searchers' camp in less than an hour or two. Then it would take a couple or three hours more to get down here to Alpine."

The search centered in this region one week ago today when Will Healey (father of Vern) and Frank Bateman, Alpine farmers, found fragments of five letters up 1,000-foot Lone Peak.

WIDOW OF AUTHOR DIES IN NEW YORK

Mrs. Elizabeth Winthrop Chanler Chapman Was 71.

BARRYTOWN, N. Y., June 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Winthrop Chanler Chapman, 71, widow of John Jay Chapman, author, died at her home here yesterday after an illness of a week.

Daughter of the late John Winthrop Chanler, of Charleston, S. C., Mrs. Chapman was born in Washington, D. C., where her father served in congress. She had made her home in Barrytown since 1904.

One of her brothers, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, of New York city, served as lieutenant governor of New York state under Governor Frank W. Higgins in the years 1907 and 1908. Other brothers, now dead, were Robert Winthrop Chanler, painter; William Astor Chanler, explorer and congressman; John Winthrop Chanler and John Armstrong Chanler.

ALBERT C. RHEA.

RUSSELLVILLE, Ky., June 6.—(AP)—Albert C. Rhea, 76, died today at the home of his brother, Thomas S. Rhea, following several weeks' illness from heart trouble.

He had been prominent in Democratic politics for half a century. His brother, former chairman of the state highway commission, was defeated for the Democratic nomination as governor in the runoff primary in September, 1935.

beautiful golden horizon behind to linger for those who love him best."

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

At the celebration of his 92nd birthday anniversary, Mr. Hallman gave as his recipe for attaining a ripe old age "right living, moderation and a genuine concern for one's fellow men."

Home in Business Mideast.

Mr. Hallman witnessed the march of business out West Peachtree street. From the windows of his home, he watched the erection of business establishments around his property, but so sheltered and protected are his house and garden that he never desired to live elsewhere.

When Mr. Hallman marked his 90th birthday anniversary, the board of directors of the Georgia Power Company adopted formal resolutions honoring him.

In April, 1926, The Constitution carried an editorial praising Mr. Hallman as an "unusual man," which said in part:

"He has never faltered in his faith, and has lived such a quiet, even, methodical life that the more than four score years that have passed have left him as well and vigorous and alert to the call of business and to the responsibilities of a good, active citizen as most men of half his age."

"Golden Horizon."

On his 84th birthday, James A. Hollomon, in his column, "Just In Passing," in The Constitution, wrote:

"Atlanta is great because it was built by pioneers of the J. C. Hallman type. May there be many happy returns of the day, and as he approaches the sunset may each natal day be happier and happier, until the full soft glow of its sinking. And then may it leave a

Churchgoer Faces Home Brew Charge

Detective Lieutenant R. P. Burnett and Detective H. L. Sexton raided a house at 724-B Connally street, S. E., and confiscated 128 bottles of home brew and 33 gallons "in the making" early last night.

But that's not the story, although home brew is a comparative rarity in these days of legal beer.

A short time after Lieutenant Burnett returned to police headquarters a negro who identified himself as Abe Allen, telephoned him, reportedly saying, "I'm sorry I was out when you called. I was at church. I'll be down to surrender in the morning."

sexual offenses. Of these 21 have been found guilty.

"Of priests belonging to orders nine are involved, among whom only one has been found guilty."

"Hence, of a total of 25,635 priests only 58 have been accused of sexual offenses, and that is less than one-fourth of 1 per cent, or one priest to every 500."

It was reported reliably tonight that the German Catholic church might ask the Nazi government to allow it to investigate the records of about 1,800 lay brothers accused of immorality.

If the charges are found to be justified, it was said, the church itself would take steps to expel them from their orders.

VATICAN DIDN'T ORDER

VATICAN CITY, June 6.—(AP)—Vatican prelates said tonight the declaration read today from Roman Catholic pulpits in Germany was a "good thing" but was not ordered by the Vatican. But, they added, they were certain the Pope was told of it.

SPIRITUAL IDEALISM HELD WORLD NEED

Bishop Kern Asserts Capitalism Must Fail If Based on Selfishness.

LEXINGTON, Va., June 6.—(AP) Bishop Paul Kern, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Durham, N. C., told 163 Washington and Lee seniors today that "capitalism will fail if based upon selfishness and Communism must fail without selfishness."

Delivering the baccalaureate sermon in historic Lee chapel, Bishop Kern said "we must develop national selfless devotion to make the economic order the servant of mankind, and the world must be built upon co-operative sharing. You must bring spiritual idealism into the political, business and economic world."

He said there are new continents to be discovered in the realm of economic adjustment, that idealism should not die when it crosses the threshold of worldly matters, and that an adventurous spirit must be carried into the continent of underprivileged.

MARSHAL WOUNDS TWO MEN, WOMAN

Wife Attacks Officer Arresting Her Husband.

CORNING, Ark., June 6.—(AP) Two men and a woman, wounded in a battle with City Marshal George Johnson, of Reyno, last night, received hospital treatment here today.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hudson were reported in a critical condition. Peck Wilson, their hired hand, was less dangerously hurt. The marshal was confined to bed with three broken ribs and numerous bruises.

Sheriff John T. Thompson said that Marshal Johnson, after arresting Hudson for drunkenness at a roadhouse, was attacked by the trio, who took Johnson's pistol from him and stomped him about the body.

Johnson had a second pistol in his pocket, according to the sheriff, which he drew and fired. One bullet entered Hudson's wrist and lodged in his abdomen. A second struck Mrs. Hudson in the neck. Wilson was wounded in the leg.

TREASURY BORROWS HALF BILLION TODAY IN OFFER OF BONDS

Money To Be Used for Absorbing Flow of Gold From Europe.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—(UP)—The United States treasury tonight made arrangements to borrow half a billion dollars tomorrow from the nation's investors, at unusually high interest rates, to provide sufficient funds for the absorption of the unchecked flow of gold entering from the war-scarred nations of Europe.

Secretary Morgenthau will place upon the money markets $500,000,000 in two note series paying interest of 1 3-8 and 1 3-4 per cent. Only $300,000,000 of this will be used for conversion purposes—replacing treasury bills that mature in nine days.

A half-billion-dollar "contingency fund" will be set aside for gold sterilization purposes, enabling the government to assimilate enormous imports of the yellow metal, but at the same time boosting the national debt to approximately $35,775,000,000. This is about six times the total amount of money in circulation in the country.

The treasury, it was revealed, also has started a new promotion campaign to stimulate sale of "baby" savings bonds. A direct mail drive was begun in an attempt to increase popularity of these securities which already yield an estimated $1,000,000 a day. The campaign is timed to reach its height while investors are receiving interest and dividend distributions.

Experts estimate that 70 per cent of the foreign bullion hoarded in London, the world's major gold market, has been or is in the process of being sold.

old-age pensions, aid for the blind, aid for widows and aid for dependent children that these amendments will bring an additional pay roll tax on the people of Georgia.

"Every one who has studied the act knows that it will mean no additional pay roll tax but will only serve to get back from the federal government that which the employers of our state are now paying and will continue to pay whether we ratify these amendments or not."

"At present the employers of Georgia are paying into the federal treasury a total of $3,500,000 a year in pay roll taxes which is going to pay old age pensions in other states. When Georgia ratifies these amendments Tuesday that $3,500,000 a year will come back to us and we will see to it that the aged, the blind and others who merit benefits are given them."

500,000 Eligible to Vote.

"There are more than 500,000 citizens of the state eligible to vote in Tuesday's election. It is the most important such election we have ever had. I hope that all of those eligible will go to the polls and cast their ballots. I am certain that the entire program of amendments will be ratified. I also believe that if everyone votes we will have the greatest majority ever given a governmental program in our state."

The Governor and Mrs. Rivers left last night for north Georgia. Today they will be guests at DeMorest and early tonight they will be given a barbecue in commemoration of their 23rd wedding anniversary. This celebration will be at Clayton and will be given by the county officers of Rabun county. Following the barbecue, the chief executive and Mrs. Rivers will go to their home at Lakeland to cast their ballots.

Reid's Statement.

Reid issued the following statement yesterday:

"The people of Georgia are for the program to be voted on Tuesday and will vote for the constitutional amendments. To do otherwise would be to take a backward step. The vote last September showed Georgia wants to catch up and go forward. The group that would isolate Georgia and deny its people the benefits of the Roosevelt administration is a small group, as their majority for the amendments Tuesday will show."

"I want to thank the members of the Democratic committee, the various county committees and other workers for their fine cooperation and to express gratitude of the committee to the loyal Democrats. They have rendered unselfish services to the state in this campaign, which has sought to give helpful information as to how this program will work and what its benefits will do for our people. Let our friends realize the importance of getting out a big vote."

30 Years of Dry Law Experiment Back of Repeal Vote Tomorrow

Repeal Proposal Offered Has Been Altered Considerably From 1935 Act, Which Lost by Narrow Margin of 243 Ballots.

The repeal proposal to be submitted tomorrow has been altered but the issues have not changed materially since 1935, when the state rejected repeal by 243 votes. Repealists claim a "partial victory" from the triangular referendum in 1935 which legalized wine and beer but defeated a proposal to permit the sale of whisky and other hard liquor.

A total of 82,134 votes were cast for retention of the then 28-year-old law and 81,891 for repeal in that year.

Of the state's 159 counties 49 voted wet.

The wet counties were predominantly heavily populated or urban centers.

Fulton Voted Wet.

Fulton county cast 5,468 votes majority in favor of repeal and DeKalb, also in the metropolitan area, was damp.

Savannah turned out a 9,795 majority for prohibition out of 11,565 ballots cast. Bibb county Dougherty, Muscogee and Clark voted wet also.

General of the Consolidated Forces for Prohibition have not overlooked the 1935 vote in planning their 1937 campaign.

Smaller, rural counties have seen diligent organization work on the part of the anti-repealists, although neither side has overlooked the densely populated areas.

Anti-repealists have emphasized liquor is a "moral" issue and contended the legalization of liquor would not permit control of liquor.

Repealists say liquor is here and recording a full expression for the progressive program."

Griffin Expects Victory.

S. Marvin Griffin, of Bainbridge, chairman of the Georgia Alcoholic Control Association, said last night that his organization's campaign in support of repeal was concluded and that he is "waiting with confidence for the will of the voters."

"We have presented our case in a straightforward and undramatic manner," he declared. "I believe that we have convinced a large majority of the voters of our state that the dry law is a failure, even a farce. I confidently look forward to victory for repeal by a wide margin."

W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta, chairman of the Consolidated Dry Forces, was equally as confident.

"The people of the state will not be fooled by liquor propaganda," the veteran dry leader asserted. "They will stand by the law just as they did two years ago except by a greater majority."

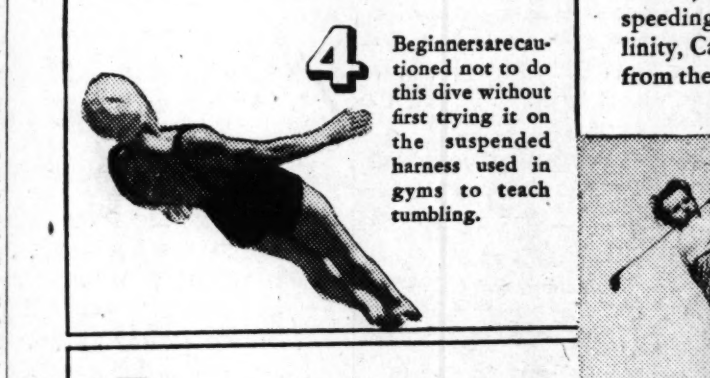

Repeal was defeated in 1935 by the narrow margin of 243 votes.

SOVIET UNION MAPS 3D 'FIVE YEAR PLAN'

Russia Will Attempt To Surpass U. S. Industrial Achievements.

MOSCOW, June 6.—(P)—The Soviet Union's third five-year plan, designed this time "to overtake and surpass America," today was taking form in the hands of the nation's industrial leaders.

It probably will go into effect next January 1, immediately on completion of the second five-year plan.

In the offices, drafting rooms and shops of a thousand Soviet trusts and industries the planners were blue-printing the second phase of the industrial future of the sprawling union.

Figures indicate the government hopes to accomplish more in the third period than the combined achievements of the first and second five-year plans.

The second plan already has been pronounced a success by Soviet officials.

The planners assume a population increase of 125,000,000 within the next 25 years to raise the present 175,000,000 to 300,000,000.

The prime goal of the next period will be increase of Russian labor's productivity.

As during the first two five-year plans the great emphasis of the third period apparently will be on capital goods construction, transportation, electrification, canal construction, airplanes and automobiles and mining.

STEAMSHIP FOUNDERS; ALL ABOARD ARE SAFE

MONTEVIDEO, June 6.—(UP)—The Buenos Aires-to-Colonia steamship Vienna foundered at 4 p. m. (Atlanta time) today after running aground off Farallon island, 20 miles from Colonia, it was reported here. All aboard were reported safe.

Earlier in the day the Vienna radioed this port that she was "taking water." No other details were available.

Quaint Entries Found in 1855 Police Records

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 6.—(P)—Police chuckled today over quaint entries penned 82 years ago in a "before the war" record book, discovered during remodeling of their headquarters.

Most outmoded notations in the 1855 record dealt with slaves, who were listed in this fashion: "Richard, property of John Doe."

"Entertaining other negroes after the 8 p. m. bell" appears as a frequent charge. Slaves caught out after that hour were jailed for "safekeeping." They were docketed at any hour if they failed to wear the required badges.

But the slaves won some privileges: "Permission granted by the mayor to Lucky to have a sitting-up over the remains of her child," says one entry, which adds in warning, "No loud singing after 11:30."

White persons had their ups and downs too. Three men obtained "permission to have a serenading party, but good behavior is required all night and morning."

Another was jailed for "improper conduct—turning" his wife and children outdoors.

Bizarre charges booked included: "Gibbs, property of Captain Thomas Ford—attempts to abduct the cook from the brig Aoniam," and "Henry, property of B. L. Cole—coming out of a bar-room smoking a cigar."

DIXIE NEWSPAPER MAN DIES IN SOUTH CAROLINA

YORK, S. C., June 6.—(P)—Watson Bell, 43, widely known South Carolina newspaperman, died here tonight of a heart ailment. Bell had lived here since ill health forced him to retire from active newspaper work seven years ago.

He did editorial work on Charlotte (N. C.), Greensboro (N. C.), Birmingham (Ala.), Richmond (Va.) and Baltimore newspapers, as well as several in this state.

A brother, Brian Bell, news editor of the Associated Press at San Francisco, and a sister, Miss Nan Bell, of Raleigh, N. C., survive.

"I PUT great emphasis on good digestion," says Dorothy Poynton Hill, Camel smoker. "It's a long way down when I dive from the high board," Dorothy continues, "and if you add all the spins and twists I do—you can see why I enjoy Camels 'for digestion's sake.'"

Mealtimes (right), and between meals, too, Dorothy prefers Camels. "I smoke whenever I want to," she says. "Camels never jangle my nerves, and don't irritate my throat." By speeding up the flow of digestive fluids and increasing alkalinity, Camels give digestion a helping hand. Take your cue from the steady smokers. Make it Camels! They set you right!

Room Suitable for Growing Family, Decorated by Miss Boykin

Pleasant Homes

By ELIZABETH McRAE BOYKIN.

BECOMING.

A becoming room for dainty Dot. "That's my best color," commented Dottie Young as we admired the lovely old blue of her living room walls. And it does bring out her eyes and makes her skin simply bloom.

She used her old mulberry twist weaver rug then hunted to find curtains of a pinkish cast, but verging toward a pale mulberry tinge rather than the usual peach tone. This was a rayon gauze that hangs delicately but it's not really transparent. She followed this tone through to a deep pinkish lavender, which she quilted and used as a slip cover for a pair of chairs. All the other furniture she slip-covered in a sprawling floral on a light beige ground, but with deep purple-reds in the pattern—almost mulberry they were.

Crystal for accents, lilacs and lavender sweetpeas and iris and delphinium are Dottie's favorite flowers when she can get just the right pink. Flat silver frames for her pictures made unexpectedly distinctive details... and her silver tea set repeated that note.

Dottie herself is usually to be found in something trailing and creamy colored, or else in simple pastel linens that go so well with her eyes and that room.

The reason, she pleases us so much is because it not only suits dainty Dot, but it has substance enough to match her broad-shouldered gray-tweed Henry. And the furniture coverings can stand a growing family since they all zip on and off for cleaning.

Hollywood Today

By HAROLD HEFFERMAN

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.—Watching the stars at work: "General Hospital" at M-G-M.—"Send a dirty nurse in here," yells Director George Seitz. A door to the set's operating room opens and a very clean, sanitary-looking nurse walks over to the operating table to confer with the director.

Seitz means no harm. It is only his method of differentiating between the six studio bit girls made up as nurses, and the six bona-fide professionals brought in from a Hollywood hospital to show the amateurs how to look and act like nurses in the picture.

Later, when Seitz calls for a "clean nurse," one of the ladies in white from the hospital steps out of the background and moves up for a conference. All morning long, the stage echoes with calls for "clean nurses" or "dirty nurses," and both the real nurses and their understudies are having a lot of fun out of the situation.

Leading puppets of this new "Men in White" film are Franchot Tone, first-class doctor and a good man; Virginia Bruce, more or less wicked butterfly, wed by him in a moment of infatuation; Leonard Penn, a bloodthirsty surgeon, and Maureen O'Sullivan, his wife—a noble nurse, secretly in love with good Dr. Tone. Their misdirected romances are about to be straightened out right here in this operating room sequence. It is a key scene. Penn lies on the table after a train accident, waiting for Dr. Tone to amputate his limbs.

Busiest and most important-appearing person on the stage is Dr. Harry M. Nardini, a Hollywood surgeon, who skips about, telling all the actors how to appear sanitary. Dr. Nardini is technical adviser on the picture—at a salary that will make some of his operating fees look sick—and he doesn't want those boner hunters from the medical association writing in and telling the studio where he was wrong.

"These hospital films sure might be a mess if they didn't have some kind of expert advice," said the doctor, shaking his head. "Just think: You might find these actors' surgeons operating without gloves, the nurses improperly equipped or handing over the wrong type of knives, or any one of a hundred other little slips that would be picked to pieces by the profession."

A familiar figure in an interne's uniform passes by. Looks like a gray-haired edition of Bill Powell. Turns out to be Bill's stand-in, "Doc" Dearborn, former chiropractor, picking up a little extra money while waiting Bill's return to work. (Copyright, 1937, for The Constitution.)

A Complexion Finish That Is Waterproof And a Protection Against the Sun

By LILLIAN MAE

Do you have difficulty keeping your make-up "just right" during the warm weather? Does your powder cake when you are playing tennis and entirely disappear during the course of a swim?

I have found what I believe is the solution to your problems. At least, that is the consensus of opinion among the 20 or more young women to whom I distributed samples of this product. It is amusing to get the various reactions from a group like this, and to learn what experiments they have tried.

We'll call my find a face powder, for lack of a more fitting name, and I'm told it has a cocoa butter base. At any rate, it does carry its own foundation. Perhaps at first you, like I, might think it is too greasy for satisfactory use. But as I did go ahead by putting just a small amount on forehead, nose, each cheek and chin. Then spread with the fingers. The result as I experienced it, was a very soft, natural looking complexion—no caking or flakiness. Rouge applied over it, also adheres softly and smoothly.

And best of all, your "complexion stays put" for many, many hours, without renewing. It is said to be waterproof, and one of my assistants who finds nothing more enjoyable than a swim, has verified that fact for me. It is said to make less noticeable freckles and skin blemishes, and this same person looks much less freckled when wearing the product.

It may be had in white, flesh,

FRIENDLY COUNSEL

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

Dear Miss Chatfield: I have learned to my sorrow that the boy friend indulges in liquor in a large way. It's a delicate subject and I will appreciate it if you will tell me how to break him of the habit. MAY.

Answer: My dear girl, if I could tell you how to wear your boy friend from the bottle, I would have solved a problem that perplexes wives, sweethearts, mothers, sisters and the boys themselves. Since the time of the flood the bottle has been getting the best of the boys. Noah slipped. Since history has been recorded the boys have drunk too much and the women who loved them have wept. In this year of grace some of the men still drink too much and the women weep.

A man will not admit that the bottle has him down until he reaches the point that he cannot get up between times. He says he drinks for fun, for good fellowship. As he gets older he says he drinks to hold old business customers and get new ones; for his health; as a host and as a guest, this being hospitality. If he stays with it long enough he will on occasions drink too much and bring on a headache for himself and a heartache for his womenfolks.

The girls invariably imagine that love is a cure for drink, and if not love—marriage. The girls have a mistaken faith in the power of love and they are abysmally ignorant of the power of alcohol. They believe all promises which flances make about mounting the wagon and no doubt the flances believe their own promises or they couldn't make them carry conviction. The trouble being that men themselves don't know the power of alcohol, even when they are in its grip. The big stimulation they get out of it deceives them and they imagine they are running under their own steam.

In these days when the psychiatrists can ask leading questions of a patient and discover why he thinks, talks and acts as he does, we are told that the man who drinks is using alcohol to do for him what he cannot do for himself. For instance: he hasn't the physical strength to work all day and frolic at night. One drink and he feels like a fighting cock. He goes to a party and his timidity and self-consciousness prevent his taking part in the fun. A couple of cocktails and presto! he's released to be the life of the party.

He's disappointed in love or in the job. He hasn't what it takes to impress the gals or the boss and he's depressed over his failure. With the aid of a highball he can climb out of the depression and tread air. When one highball won't hold him he takes two or three, on ad infinitum. Then the bottle has him down and love won't lift him up.

Sad, but true, a man's indulging

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK CITY, Friday.—I think one of the qualities I admire most in the world is the courage which accepts whatever life may bring, and goes on with undiminished zest in life and apparent joy. It is comparatively easy to bear the blows of fate in a bitter and somber spirit, but you do not add much to the gaiety of a rather dreary world.

Yesterday afternoon I visited a woman who has not had an easy life. She is beautiful today, not as she was as a young girl, but in growing older depth and sweetness have wiped out such minor things as lines of physical suffering and sorrow.

Physically, she is greatly handicapped, but mentally and spiritually you leave her presence with a sense that you have at last met an eager spirit. She is still keen to do things, last lost none of her curiosity, is kindly in her attitude toward others and gallant and gay in her whole approach to a life, which must be lonely at times and which is filled with a rather constant physical pain.

Just before I left she said: "I hope that if I thought it was necessary for the general good of the people in my country for me to live on a much reduced and very moderate income level, I would approach the change without any trepidation and with the feeling that I will always have with me many congenial friends."

When you realize what any change in material circumstances means to an individual who moves with great difficulty, that kind of spirit leaves you with a lump in your throat.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr. and I went to a very light but amusing play last night, called, "Room Service." There is nothing in it beyond an evening's entertainment, but I think for a warm summer's night, it is probably ideal. It is having a considerable success.

Today the commencement of the Todhunter School took place at the Junior League clubhouse. The address was given by Dr. Hendrik William Van Loon and I am sure that the young things who listened to him will not forget the impression he made upon them.

Graduations to me are never entirely cheerful occasions. You feel you should be grateful that another group of young people have successfully accomplished something which they started out to do, but there is a curious similarity between graduation and weddings. In both cases the young people are entering upon a new and somewhat hazardous adventure, the success of which lies largely in their own hands. We elders knowing the pitfalls and the difficulties cannot help, while wishing them every success, trembling a little at some of the experiences which we know they must go through.

The graduating class and the faculty were asked by Miss Elizabeth Ward, a member of the class, to lunch. Now, I am about to take the train for Hyde Park and the peace and quiet of Valkill Cottage.

Colorful Flower Stitchery

PATTERN 5878

New! Colorful! This gay flower and butterfly design that will "do wonders" for a new or not-so-new frock. Place these jolly motifs anywhere—on sleeves, skirt or bodice, or as a "corsage" at your waistline. Then embroider them with silk floss or brilliant scraps of wool. It's grand fun to splash color here and there with your needle, and an old frock, treated this way looks "brand-new." In pattern 5878 you will find a transfer pattern of one and one reverse motif 6½x8 inches; two and two reverse motifs 4x4½ inches; and four and four reverse motifs 3½x4½ inches; color suggestions; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Household Arts Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

St. Charles Garden Club Entertained.

Members of the Saint Charles Garden Club were entertained on Thursday by Mrs. F. A. Sheram at her home on Riverdale road, Mrs. Raymond Stadel presiding.

Mrs. S. A. Castellaw gave an interesting account of her recent trip to Canada. Mrs. C. H. Hutcheson, of Jonesboro Garden Club, made a short talk. Mrs. E. B. Heath was welcomed into the club as a new member. Mrs. Sanford Landers won trophy for month with a display of Japanese iris. Mrs. L. L. McMullan won a potted plant as contest prize.

An al fresco luncheon was served by the hostess and her daughter, Miss Marie Sheram. Plans were made for meeting and picnic to be held in July at Indian Springs.

SORRY...

And it's June. The month of brides. When time takes wings And pleasantly glides.

For the moment trouble departs—Fear and concern go away For the young ones to be wed.

The elders smile They're happy as well As they hold their troubled heads.

For they know its chance Though it looks all right And they try not feel their fright.

Don't YOU OR I be annoyed With the tears they shed When you wed. They only weep with knowledge That life can't stay As lovely as it is that day.

FLORENCE MAY.

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

STRETCH AND RELAX TO KEEP SLIM.

How to be streamlined at normal weight is a problem that has been solved by the movie girls. Unless she is firm about her figure, the star who weighs 110 pounds photographs at 120. Yet subnormal weight means loss of vitality, and without vitality, Hollywood has learned, there is no such thing as that mysterious quality called glamour.

Richard Kline, whose business it is to keep the Paramount stars healthy and streamlined, gives away the secret—it's exercise! Says this physical director of the movies: "You can weigh more and look slimmer with good muscle tone than with fat." Firm tissue weighs more than flabby tissue, but takes up less space.

He advises natural, progressive exercise to supply the muscles and relieve nervous strain. His program establishes a rhythmic sequence of exercises for complete contraction of the muscles, followed by just as complete relaxation for the development of poise, graceful movements and the long smooth muscles that make streamlines.

For a thin waist and flat tummy.

When the star needs to reduce in certain spots, he gives exercises which stretch the underlying muscles. The friction of the stretching type of movement breaks down the fat cells without producing any strain. Stretching tones the muscles and gives a smooth, compact appearance. Begin with this stretching exercise which Mr. Kline gives his keep-fitters:

Position: Stand in good posture. Movement: Quickly stretch the arms and body upward. Now, move the upstretched arms backward, just behind the ears, tip the chin upward—and s-t-r-e-t-c-h!

Here is the relaxing counter-part of the first exercise: Position: Feet slightly apart, body bent forward at the waist with the lower abdominal wall held up and the knees straight. Head, arms and upper part of the body must be perfectly relaxed.

Movement: Remain in this position and bob up and down, allowing the arms, shoulders and head to dangle limply, rag doll fashion. Bob twelve times.

Try this effective stretch: Position: Lying on the back, arms straight out at the sides, knees flexed and feet flat on the floor.

Movement: Keeping the upper part of the body relaxed and flat on the floor, twist at the waist and, holding the feet together, touch the right thigh to the floor on the right side and then twist back and rest the left thigh on the floor.

Mr. Kline's beautiful keeping-fitters are proof of the value of these exercises. When I asked him to name the star with the most beautiful figure, however, he accused me of trying to get him into trouble. He sidestepped neatly by naming the most pulchritudinous points of a number of stars... he knows there's safety in numbers.

The loveliest throat—Ida Lupino, who carries outh beauty fully.

Most expressive eyes—Claudette Colbert, according to an old French custom, no doubt.

Most beautiful arms and hands—Carole Lombard.

Streamlined hips—the figure of Dorothy Lamour.

Legs—Marlene Dietrich, of course, and also the tap star, Eleanor Whitney.

General symmetry—Frances Farmer, a new fascinator who has made a definite place for herself. Regal carriage—Gail Patrick. Study the Patrick posture and you will appreciate this selection. Exercise is the only method by which you can be streamlined at normal weight.

Your dietitian, IDA JEAN KAIN.

Send for the leaflets, "Summer Reducing Menus" and "Stretch the Fat From Your Waistline, Ribs and Wishbone." Enclose a 3-cent stamp and a self-addressed envelope, large size, to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution, for these leaflets. They are invaluable to your figure program. For Miss Strickland.

Miss Hazel Strickland, a bride-elect of this month, was entertained with a lingerie shower by Mrs. Parks Smith recently.

Contests were enjoyed, prizes being won by Miss Deedie Reeves and Miss Frances Head.

Present were Mesdames C. B. Strickland, Ed Coker, Bob Smith, Ed Coker Jr., L. J. Bradberry, Parks Smith, Gilbert White, Charles Wilson, W. H. Thompson, Otis Cook, J. E. White, Harvey Baker, Misses Frances Head, Ruth Roper, Deedie Reeves, Evelyn Edelman, Ruby Showmake and Hazel Strickland.

ENGLAND'S KINGS

JAMES II (1685-1688)

shared his brother Charles's exile in France. He was both soldier and sailor, led the fleet against the Dutch. He was Catholic, and tried to make England Catholic again.

No. 43

His cousin, the Duke of Monmouth, headed rebellious West Country folk. Some had pitchforks as arms, and they were easily crushed at Sedgemoor (Somerset). Last real battle fought in England. Over 500 were afterwards sent to death by cruel Judge Jeffreys at the Bloody Assizes.

James II

Because Archbishop Sancroft and six bishops defied the king's Baptist measures, they were sent to the tower and tried. When they were acquitted the people joyfully lit bonfires in the street.

William of Orange, Protestant ruler of Holland, married James's daughter Mary and was called to bring over an army. He landed in Devon and James fled to France after dropping the great battle of the Boyne in the hands of William. James never again should England have a Catholic king.

NEXT—William III and Mary II are made joint rulers by parliament. Wars with Scots and Irish. Battles of Killburnie and the Boyne. Final defeat of James II.

Girl Reserve Conference Is Set For June 10 at Camp Highland

Camp Highland, selected by the Y. W. C. A. national board for the southern regional Girl Reserve conference, will welcome over 100 delegates from four states, distinguished leaders in education and religion, Girl Reserve club advisors and Y. W. C. A. secretaries on June 22.

Miss Annie Kate Gilbert, Y. W. C. A. national board secretary, will direct Girl Reserve advisors on "Principles of Group Work" and a Girl Reserve group on "Philosophy of the Y. W. C. A." Miss Emily Woodward, authority on local conditions and problems, will conduct a class on "The New South Today."

"Careers and Colleges" will point the way toward inevitable decisions and will be led by Miss Emily Dexter, professor of psychology at Agnes Scott College. For advisors she will speak on "Phases of Adolescent Psychology." Assisting her will be Dr. Philip Davidson, also of Agnes Scott. Dr. E. H. Rece, of Emory University, will be conference minister and will preside at an open forum group on religion each morning. Mrs. Rece will be song leader.

Mrs. P. M. Wynne, of Miami, Fla., will teach class. Mrs. Geoffrey Crickmay will discuss personal adjustments and social relationships and Miss Mary Mason Hamrick, Girl Reserve secretary of Birmingham, will be correlator for the advisors' group.

Atlanta board and committee leaders will participate and will visit many groups. Mrs. Emmett Quinn, president, will assist Miss Gilbert in a presentation of "The Why of the Y." and Miss Metta May Mitchell, Mrs. Robert B. Church Jr., Mrs. Frank J. Henry and others will assist with entertainment and programs. On June 15, the Girl Reserve committee will spend the day at conference.

Mrs. Julia Rhodus McLain, Miami Girl Reserve secretary, assisted by Miss Ann Jones, of Savannah, will lead the steering committee and correlate each day's program into an evening feature. Miss Anne Primrose will give points on "Living Relationships" and how to achieve successful group actions. Mrs. Lili Bragg, of the Savannah Girl Reserve committee, will teach folk dancing; Mrs. Alice Bohannon, of the Druid Hills High school faculty, meets with Girl Reserve officers and program chairmen to tell them how to build beneficial programs throughout the year.

Conference will provide many recreational advantages with the following chairmen: Misses Mary Matthews, handicrafts; Virginia Milner and Sara Lawrence, swimming, tennis and archery; Dorothy Cubbage, advisor from Savannah, bookshop, and Little McKay, of Agnes Scott, store and postoffice. Miss Jacques Poole will be conference registrar. Over 20 Atlanta Girl Reserves will represent 11 local clubs. Miss Polly Ramsey, of North Fulton, who served on the planning committee, will welcome guests and introduce leaders. Informal games, dancing and acquainted skits will feature opening night.

Friendly Twelve.

Mrs. William Bryant was hostess to the Friendly Twelve Club recently at her home on Hartford place. Mrs. Wilmer Anderson, the president, presided. Cootie was played, with Mrs. B. D. McClenahan and Mrs. C. T. Everett winning prizes.

Members present were Mesdames Wilmer Anderson, C. T. Everett, J. H. Kirk, B. D. McClenahan, R. Stalworth, F. T. Wilbanks and the hostess. Mrs. T. Everett invited the club to meet with her June 7.

Miami Bride Visits Here

Mrs. Charles C. Thomas was Mrs. Dena Marlowe before her marriage in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., on May 29. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas are identified with social activities in Miami Beach where Mrs. Thomas, formerly of Atlanta, has had a winter home for several years. They are visiting the bride's sister, Mrs. Edgar F. Champion, at 676 Elmwood drive, and will go to California and Mexico before returning to Miami Beach where they will reside. Girl Scouts Plan Activities At Civitania and Day Camps

Interest among Girl Scout troops is centered in the thirteenth season for Camp Civitania which opens June 20. There will be eight weeks of camping similar to individual camps, with Miss Lucille Cannon as director. She will be assisted by a trained staff composed of a trained registered nurse, dietitian, life saving examiner and three adult counselors to units of 16 girls each.

All activities at the camp, including swimming, singing, handicraft, nature, life-saving, dramatics, folk dancing, hiking, woodcraft, campfire and pioneering, are done in units and the entire camp meets only at meal time, and on special occasions. The season is divided into four eight-week periods, although many girls will remain throughout the entire time. Mrs. Frank Quentin is camp chairman for the Atlanta Girl Scouts.

"Day camping" is a new feature among the Atlanta scouts, with two sites where the programs will be held. One is at "Woods-Ho" in Druid Hills for districts 1 and 11 and will be open Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Mrs. Mrs. Drummond Fete Mobile Visitors.

A group of Mobile visitors were complimented recently at the dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. W. Clyde Drummond at their home on Argonne avenue. Sharing honors were the hosts sister, Mrs. Harry Crawford, and her daughters, Misses Mary Donna, Annie Pearl and Patricia Crawford and Mr. Robert Pearson.

The table was covered with a lace cloth and was graced in the center with a silver bowl filled with garden flowers. Silver candelsticks held burning tapers. Present were only members of the family, covers being placed for the honor guests, Mr. and Mrs. W. Clyde Drummond Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Drummond, Misses Margaret and Mary Drummond and Hal Drummond.

Mrs. Crawford and her daughters are en route to their home in Mobile from Sullins, Va., where they attended the graduation of Miss Annie Pearl Crawford from Sullins College.

Miss Small Fetes Mrs. Anderson.

Among informal affairs of the week is the tea at which Miss Jane Small entertains on Friday at her home on Myrtle street for Mrs. Albert Anderson, of Toronto, Canada.

Mrs. Anderson with her daughter and Mr. Anderson is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Spalding on Rivers road, and is being honored at a number of informal social affairs during her visit. She is the former Miss Constance Spalding and moved to Canada to reside last year.

Linen Shower.

Miss Joy Cloud entertained recently at a linen shower in compliment to Miss Evelyn Smith, bride-elect, at the home of her sister, Mrs. John C. Holt on Forest road. Mrs. A. J. Cloud and Mrs. John C. Holt assisted.

Guests included Misses Sally Joe Thurmond, Polly White, Marion Farjaron, Eddie Ingram, Bobbie McAfee, Nanette Bagley, Rena Matthews, Dorothy Malcom, Gertrude McKeown and Mesdames Mackay, William Braxton, Walter Baker, J. H. Byrley, M. Peacock, J. R. Mickelson, Gordon Smith, J. A. Smith, J. H. Taylor, John C. Holt and A. J. Cloud.

Music Club Meets.

The College Park Junior Music Club met recently at the home of Miss Frances Nelson. A program on opera was presented by Kenig O'Neill.

Taking part were Evi Warlick, Margaret Dorsey, Nellie Foster, Louise Biss, Paula Bretz, Sue Bretz and Kellie O'Neil. Spanish selections were played by Miss Ida Jolly, counselor.

Miss Virginia Courts And Mr. Wayne Honored at Parties

Among important social events of the week-end was the aperitif party at which Mr. and Mrs. John K. Ottley Jr. entertained at their home on Rivers road honoring Miss Virginia Courts and her fiancé, Tucker Wayne.

The home was beautifully decorated with quantities of bright colored summer garden flowers used in artistic arrangement. The table in the dining room was overlaid with a lace cloth and was centered with a silver bowl filled with pastel shaded flowers.

Miss Courts and Mr. Wayne shared honors yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pearce, whose marriage was a recent event, at the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Strupper at their home on Pace's Ferry road.

Tea was served in the lovely gardens of the home with the growing plants and colorful foliage forming a beautiful and effective background for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Robinson Jr. assisted in entertaining.

The marriage of Miss Courts and Mr. Wayne will be a social event of June 16 taking place at the home of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Courts, on Cherokee road and followed by a reception at the Capital City Country Club. The couple are being honored at a number of parties prior to the ceremony.

Miss Nancy Stair's luncheon takes place tomorrow for Miss Courts and Mrs. Hunter Bell's tea Friday was another compliment to the lovely bride-elect, Mrs. John Ottley Jr., and Mrs. William Wellborn assisted the hostess in entertaining the guests who number 30.

Following the business session a musical program, under the leadership of Mrs. Annie Mae Norton, was given. Selections were rendered by little Misses Jane Rushin, Dorothy Brannon and Charlotte Roberts. Mrs. Chester Martin, fifth district vice president, spoke on "Gardening, A National and International Occupation." At the conclusion of the program tea was served in Mrs. Ballenger's garden by Mesdames Jameson, Hicks and Miss Ruby Smith.

Alpha Chi Omega Group Enjoys Party Given at Gholston Home

By Sally Forth.

THAT popular and beloved club leader, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, has had another honor conferred upon her, that of being named the first patroness of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority at the University of Georgia. Mrs. Gholston was thus honored upon the initiation of the chapter last fall at the university, and since that time her gracious hospitality has been extended her "girls," as she calls them, upon many occasions.

The most recent party was given Sunday by Mrs. Gholston and her husband at their lovely home in Comer when members of the sorority, their dates and a few friends assembled to enjoy the entertainment for which the Gholstons are famed.

Supper was served at fresco just at sunset, with the guests assembling at tables placed on the spacious lawn surrounding the home. Delicious viands tempted the guests, including delicious Brunswick stew, the preparation of which the hostess excels in. Prior to supper, the guests visited the fish pond, where boating, feeding the fish and gathering of water lilies was enjoyed.

The girls attending were Cora Cheney, Charlotte Maulehagen, Susan Dillingham, Mary Carter Stone, Caroline Baggs, Martha Darden, Mary Suggs, Novena Harrison, Margaret Conger and Evelyn Jones. Their escorts completed the party.

ALICE THOMAS and Angelique DeGolian, who only reached their teen age two years ago, are having the time of their young lives in Annapolis, Md., watching the former's older cousin and the latter's older sister participate in the commencement festivities at the Naval Academy.

Although a few years too young to attend the dances honoring Uncle Sam's midshipmen Alice and Angelique are deriving quite a kick, so to speak, from the vantage of the sidelines. They were accompanied to Maryland's capital by Angelique's parents and by Martha DeGolian, older daughter of the Felix DeGolians.

With her brother, Felix, Jr., who received his diploma last week from the academy Martha is also having the time of her young life attending the celebrated June week parties at Annapolis.

Another cousin, Ida Akers, is another Atlanta belle attending the whirl of gayeties in Annapolis. Ida, who graduated a few days ago from Gunston Hall, is chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. William Akers.

Sally hears that Alice and Angelique will not return to Atlanta with their elders but will go to Baltimore to visit another one of Alice's cousins, Ruth King New, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl New who reside in that fashionable section of Baltimore known as Ten Hills.

The Atlanta girls will be joined in Baltimore by Jeannette Sibley. With Mr. and Mrs. New's family the trio of Atlantas will spend a week on Chesapeake bay where the News own a home overlooking the waters of Maryland's eastern shore.

Alice's good time will not end at the conclusion of her visit in Maryland. She will accompany Mr. and Mrs. New and their daughter to New York to wave farewell from the docks to Mrs. New and Ruth when they sail for Europe.

Crape Myrtle Flower Show.

The spring flower show of Crape Myrtle Garden Club was held Thursday. Judges of the show and officers of the club were entertained at luncheon before the show by Mrs. J. Y. Wilson at her home on Maria avenue, S. E. Judges were Mesdames Chester Martin, C. B. Ellington and C. W. Heery.

Prizes awarded were: Blue Ribbons; Miss Daisy Harpe, Mrs. F. H. Harris, J. L. Wilson, John Miles, Paul Chipman, J. L. Benton, W. C. Digby, H. O. Puckett and Marvin Johnson. Blue Ribbons: Mesdames J. L. Benton, Paul Chipman, Miss Daisy Harpe, Mesdames J. Y. Wilson, W. C. Digby and Marvin Johnson.

Mrs. H. Y. Harris won the sweepstakes for her double larkspur in a large white container. Miss Daisy Harpe was awarded second prize for the largest number of blue ribbons. Mrs. John Miles won the third prize for the prettiest tea setting.

A fashion show, sponsored by Mrs. Joe Ellis and the flower show, was held in the afternoon. Next meeting will be held with Mrs. W. S. Toney on Atlanta avenue.

Richards, Rose Smash Homers as Crackers Win Final, 11-6

Down on the bench yesterday afternoon, the Crackers were talking about hitting. Someone had just said of Pierre Emil Mailho, the California Frenchman, that he was hitting .398 and that .398 was a bargain in any league.

Paul Richards—It's a good thing I'm not hitting around .400. I'd be worried to death. All the time, I'd be worried.

Buster Chatham—Mailho isn't worried. Richards—He doesn't know how to worry. A Baseball Writer—Is there any royal road to successful batting?

Mailho—Willie Keeler said it—Hit 'em where they ain't.

Eddie Rose—Hitting is 75 per cent luck.

Mailho—That's right. Some days you hit line drives, and they go right into somebody's hands. Other days they go between 'em or beyond 'em. It's like Willie Keeler said, you got to hit 'em where they ain't.

Baseball Writer—What worries a hitter most, other than pitchers.

Mailho—One of those consecutive strings. You get to wondering if you are going to get one hit. You forget about hitting. Just one hit becomes more important.

Alex Hooks—Man, that's all I've been able to do, get one hit per game.

Chatham—That's better than those collars.

Hooks—Well, that's true. One is better than a collar.

(A 'collar' is a baseball player's word for the figure zero. Once it was 'horse collar.' Now it's merely 'collar.' Hence one hit is better than no hits, or a collar.)

Baseball Writer—This isn't a very superstitious ball club.

Richards—No, there are not many screw balls on the club.

Chatham—There doesn't seem to be so many in baseball as there used to be.

Richards—Hughie Critz was the worst I ever saw.

Mailho—What about him?

Richards—Every time he went out he would take the infielder's glove where it had been tossed on the grass and toss it to another spot. He never failed to do that.

Mailho—Yes?

Richards—Well, one day Rabbit Maranville took his glove in to the bench with him. He had learned about Critz' habit. Critz nearly went crazy looking for the glove. Then he saw Maranville on the bench laughing and waving his glove. They had a tough time getting him to start the inning.

It was time for the meeting. And so they all trooped in to the club house to discuss ways of means of battling the Lookouts.

THE UMPIRES WERE SAYING.

Umpires Steamboat Johnson, Hadley (Bulldog) Williams and Paul Kober, an excellent trio, were getting into their 'suits of blue,' in their undressing room under the stands.

Steamboat Johnson, whose turn it was to go behind the plate, was putting on his armor, which looks something like that worn in the days when knights were bold.

Steamboat Johnson had fined a Chattanooga player the day before sight unseen.

Taft Wright stopped outside the door where the umpires were after the game and delivered himself of a Philippic. Steamboat recognized his voice.

The talk turned to discipline.

"The Southern league is the best minor league in baseball," said Umpire Kober, "and one reason for it is because President John D. Martin has maintained discipline."

"I've umpired played or managed in every minor league except the International and the Coast league. This one is the best. People want baseball and not a lot of brawls. President Martin has done a great job."

The Southern league president very wisely insists that umpires may not be insulted or attacked after the game is over.

Steamboat Johnson was the umpire who caused the rule to be adopted. It happened a dozen years ago when Johnny Brock was catching for Atlanta. The game was played in Nashville. There were cracks in the wall.

Brock was in the shower room. He turned toward the wall and called Steamboat Johnson some pet names.

"I hear you, Johnny Brock," shouted the Steamer, "even though I cannot see you I hear you. And that will cost you $10."

"That's the first time," said Bert Niehoff the next day, "I ever heard of a ball player being fined through a crack in the wall."

PROBLEMS OF THE NIGHT.

The umpires do not think the lighting systems about the league are working as well as last.

Their idea is too many owners failed to repaint or gild their reflectors.

"What was the most unusual problem you have had in a night game?" I asked of the three umpires.

"Mine was in Kansas City," said Kober. "Just as the hitter hit the ball to the outfield the lights went off."

"What did you do?"

"I called it no play. You couldn't see if the outfielder missed it or caught it. They argued it had to be something, either an out or a hit or an error. But I stuck to my decision. There was no rule but common sense told me it was not a play. So we had the man hit again when the lights came on."

"And once in Decatur in the Three-Eye league," said Kober, the business officer in the stands pulled the field switch the very instant the fielder caught a fly ball for the third out. He could have dropped it and no one been the wiser. They made a rule the lights had to stay on until the players left the field."

Umpires Williams and Johnson have had no such experiences. Twice they have had the lights go out—both times in Nashville—but each time it was while the teams were changing during innings.

The balls arrived for the Sunday game and they got busy "dirtying them." Pitchers are not allowed to discolor the balls. The umpires rub the balls with dry red clay before the game. This removes the "slick" new "feel" of the ball.

The best red clay for that purpose comes from Birmingham.

The umpires carry a small bag of it, replenishing the supply on each visit to Birmingham.

And all the while you may have been thinking Birmingham was not a useful city.

SUTTER EASILY DEFEATS HUNT IN MATCH HERE

Tulane Star, Abrams Beat Joel and Bobbitt in Doubles.

By BETTY MATHIS.

Ernie Sutter, younger of Tulane's "tennis-playing Sutters," and holder of the southern and intercollegiate net titles, yesterday bested young Joel Hunt, who had been seriously considered Davis cup material this year, in two out of three sets at the Biltmore Tennis Club, 6-2, 6-3, 5-7.

And to make his performance more convincing, he came back in the doubles with his partner, Joe Abrams, and took two straight sets from Hunt and his local partner, Russel Robbitt, 6-2, 6-3.

Sutter appeared at top form for the defense of his southern title, which starts today at Nashville.

Yesterday's exhibition match was no dull affair, but was surprising in that the tow-headed Californian, conqueror of Betsy Grant only last Thursday, could not get going in time to save off a shellacking at the hands of the New Orleans star.

FOR THE FANS.

The principals, after deciding that the match should be determined on a two-out-of-three-set basis, agreed to play out the full three sets, just to help the show along.

Hunt, it must be said, was not the master of his game as on the occasion of his meetings with Grant here this year. And Sutter, on the other hand, seemed to have perfect control of every stroke.

Hunt won only 12 points in the first set while Sutter was taking advantage of Joe's many errors and adding to that advantage with well-executed placements and passing shots.

In the second set, Hunt took the first game and the second, and then returned to his error-making. He won the eighth game with the loss of 1 point, but the effort was futile.

Sutter was not only outplaying but outguessing his highly regarded foe at almost every turn.

HUNT IMPROVES.

The third set found Hunt holding his own and managing to force Sutter into errors with a hard service and blasting shots from the forehand. His drop shots which worked so well against Grant were practically non-existent, however. Toward the end of the set it was the usual Hunt game on display once again for Atlanta tennis fans.

Hunt and Bobbitt practiced the two-handed forehand shot which Betsy Grant brought back from his Davis cup match with Jack Browne, but it did them no good in the doubles, which followed.

Scores of 6-2 and 6-4 are indicative of the youngsters' non-effectiveness. Only at the start of the second set did either of the two losers appear to have command of his game—and then not for long.

All four of yesterday's players will participate in the southern net meet beginning at Nashville today.

10,000 Watch 'Hell Rider' Show

More than 10,000 Atlantans witnessed a return engagement of Mickey Martin and his "Hell Riders" yesterday afternoon at Lakewood park.

The troop, brought back by popular demand after a record-breaking crowd saw its performances last week, supplied the thousands with a thrill for every minute of its two-hour show.

Highlighting the 10-act card was Bob Hays' escape from a blazing garage in an old automobile. For a moment or so it seemed that the car was stalled. Flames, which had originated from a gasoline-saturated garage built around the car especially for the "Return From Hell" stunt, were leaping all about him.

Doggie Artrip, clowning member of the daredevil, crashed sideways into a parked automobile after alighting from a pair of four-foot skis. Artrip was injured last week while driving one of the head-on-collision cars, but escaped hurt Sunday doing the same stunt.

Martin, who was also injured last week, yesterday successfully turned over a car four times. The veteran daredevil, who has been in the business for 13 years, also hurdled two trucks without mishap.

Miss Ann Terry, who turned out to be Mrs. Mickey Martin, gave the crowd quite a thrill when she crashed through a flaming board wall after jumping off a pair of four-foot skis.

American Bakeries Beats Covington, 6-1

COVINGTON, Ga., June 6.—American Bakeries of Atlanta defeated the Covington Mill Trojans here today before a large crowd, 6-1. The visitors scored four of their runs in the first inning on two hits. Two bases on balls and three errors. A double and two singles added two more runs in the fifth frame.

CAFE WINS.

Central Cafe defeated Piedmont Mills, 15 to 3, Sunday afternoon at Egan Park.

After 50 Years---Atlantan Rejoins Old Crew Mates

Fifty years ago at the University of Pennsylvania, one of the senior stars on the crew was Alan D. Whittaker, now a well-known consulting engineer in Atlanta. Last week Mr. Whittaker returned to his Alma Mater for the class reunion. He and his old team-mates got together as shown above (left to right): Former Senator Wharton Pepper, stroke; Francis E. Green, Frank B. Gummey and Alan D. Whittaker. The coxswain is William Newbold, 12 years old, grandson of Mr. Pepper. It is likely the most venerable crew in the history of rowing.

ADMIRAL FEARED OUT FOR SEASON

NEW YORK, June 6.—(AP)—As the result of an injury suffered in his record-smashing triumph in the Belmont stakes, Samuel Riddle's War Admiral probably will not race again this season.

The little son of Man o' War, which tied Handy Mandy's American record and bettered his famous sire's track mark as he stepped the mile and a half in 2:22 3-5, grabbed his right foreleg soon after the start. He set all the pace, beating Maxwell Howard's Scene-shifter by four lengths, and finished with blood spurting from a wound the size of a half dollar.

"I don't see how he can be brought back to the races before fall and that is even very doubtful," said his trainer, George Conway, as he sat outside his stable stall today.

Only 24 hours before, the Admiral had become the fourth horse in turf history to win the "triple crown" consisting of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont stakes. The other three were Sir Barton (1919), Gallant Fox (1930) and Omaha (1935).

"Yes, he's a great horse," said Conway. "Probably not as great as his daddy, but a better horse than Crusader, because he's got more early speed." Until the Admiral arrived on the scene Conway considered Crusader the best horse ever sired by "Old Red," which hung up the Belmont park track record of 2:28 4-5 when he was sweeping all before him in 1920.

The veteran trainer, as well as other commentators, marveled at the heart of the Admiral—injured as he broke from the barrier, nearly went down, and then went on to throw dust in the eyes of six highly regarded rivals.

Germany Leads Inter-Zone Play.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

While the United States team, American zone winner, was en route to Europe to prepare for the inter-zone round of their zone competition yesterday, three European teams reached the semi-final round and Germany, the favorite, took the lead in its quarter-final series with Italy.

Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia qualified to meet in the semi-finals in one-half of the European zone draw while Belgium advanced in the other half and will meet the winner between Germany and Italy. The semi-final series will be played next week end.

After dividing the opening singles matches Saturday, Germany gained a 2-1 edge over Italy when Gottfried Von Cramm and Heinrich Henkel scored an easy 6-3, 6-1, 6-1 doubles victory over Valentino Taroni and Feruccio Quintavalle.

Ex-Tech Gridder To Wed Saturday

John McKinley, former Georgia Tech football player, will become a Benedict Saturday at the home of his parents in Decatur.

McKinley and Miss Norma Phaup, who was his sponsor for the Vanderbilt game in 1935, will celebrate a college romance when they marry Saturday.

Alf Anderson, who is soon to graduate from Georgia with a B. S. degree in education, will be best man.

McKinley, who is working for an insurance company, has been transferred to New Orleans and he and his bride will temporarily make their home in the Crescent City.

Atlantan Rowed in '87, Did It Again Last Week

Alan D. Whittaker, 70, Former Penn Athlete, Has Been in Condition Half Century.

In the good year 1887 the rowing team at the University of Pennsylvania was winning cups. Last week an Atlantan, Alan D. Whittaker, who rowed on that team, got into his car with Mrs. Whittaker and drove up to the university for his class reunion.

He had just celebrated his 70th birthday and never felt better. So, when he arrived he and his old crew-mates got together, put a shell into the famous old Schuylkill river and went for a row.

Rowing is supposed to be the most strenuous sport there is. And back in the days when he believed there was such a thing as an "athletic heart"—which there isn't—rowing was supposed to be one of the chief producers of that type heart.

EXPLODE THAT IDEA.

The crew of 1887 certainly helps explode that old idea. Here they all are—pictured above—most of them grandfathers—and still hale and hearty.

Mr. Whittaker laughs and says he got in "condition" in college 50 years ago and never got out of condition. A peek at the picture shows him to be in better physical trim than any of his crew-mates. He still takes walks, plays golf and drove his own car to Philadelphia for the reunion.

If he cared to give endorsements, he could testify that tobacco and alcoholic drinks never hurt him for one very good reason. He never used them.

PROUD OF FATHER.

His three sons, all college graduates, are very properly proud of their father and of his career in college and out.

There are three sons, Alan D. Jr., graduated from Georgia Tech in 1920 and took his masters' degree at M. I. T. Carter Reede Whittaker graduated from Emory in 1926 and William W., the youngest, graduated from Georgia Tech in 1933.

Mr. Whittaker Sr., who has never broken training, weighed 180 when he rowed for Pennsylvania in 1887. He weighed about that when he stepped into the shell for the picture above this story.

He plans to drive back to Atlanta the latter part of this week. It was an unusual feature—the same crew intact after 50 years.

COOPER, SMITH WIN BEST BALL

Tommy Armour Misses by One Inch a Putt Worth $3,000.

TOLEDO, O., June 6.—(AP)—Silver-haired Tommy Armour, veteran of the golfing wars, missed by an inch today a putt worth $3,000 as "Lighthouse" Harry Cooper and Horton Smith, the erstwhile "Joplin ghost," grabbed the first prize of $1,000 in the third annual Inverness best ball match play tourney.

The 20-foot putt game on the final hole of the 126-hole tourney, providing the greatest finish the tourney has ever seen. Armour, winner of the national open in 1927, and Thomson, one of the greatest hitters the game has ever known, needed a victory on the last hole to tie the Smith and Cooper in the standings.

Denny Smith, two-time P. G. A. champ, and Lawson Little, winner of the American and British amateur crowns in 1934 and 1935, were the opponents of the silver-thatched veteran and Thomson.

Thomson was in the rough on his drive, as were Little and Shute, as they came down the stretch, while Armour's short drive had left him a 150-yard pitch.

Thomson's second missed the green, but Armour struck his 20 feet from the stick. Shute and Little were further away in two, and it narrowed down to where Armour needed the birdie three to win and go into a tie with the leaders. He studied the line for at least five minutes, then tapped the ball and matched it stop one inch of the cup.

The 16 professionals, all entrants in next week's national open at Oakland Hills Club, Birmingham, scored 298 birdies and six eagles during the seven matches, 75 of the sub-par holes being recorded today as they blazed down the stretch.

Johnny Michaels May Pitch Soon

John Michaels, the south-pitcher whom the Crackers secured from Rochester in a trade for Bill Schmidt, has been showing great improvement in the last three days.

Michaels yesterday pitched to batting practice and said afterward he felt fine. "I didn't try throwing any curves—I'm having to learn how to throw a curve all over again since that operation—but the arm felt great shooting fast balls up there."

If Michaels continues to show improvement, he may be ready to pitch within a week. This would be a great help, with the Cracker pitching staff in the shape it's in.

Big Jim Lindsay yesterday was nursing an enlarged thumb. He hurt it stopping a line drive in Friday night's game.

MILLER HURLS FINE BASEBALL, WEAKENS LATE

Beckman Halts Lookout Rally; Durham Faces Vols Today.

By JACK TROY.

Breaking loose with a base-hit bombardment at the expense of three Chattanooga pitchers, the Crackers captured the deciding game of the series, 11 to 6, and took a firmer grip on fourth place yesterday before a Sunday crowd of 4,402 delighted fans.

The big bombardment featured a three-run home run by Punch

Mailho's failure to connect safely in five trips Sunday cost him the league batting leadership. He fell from .398 to .388, while Stuart Hofferth, Nashville catcher, got six for seven to take over third to first place with a .400 average.

Em Paul Richards, the wiry Texan, and a two-run circuit wallop by Eddie Rose.

The Crackers trained their guns on Dick Lananah, Paul Wehner and Frank Pettiblas. They showed little favoritism, too, hitting one just about as hard as the other.

On the other hand, the Lookouts had plenty of trouble with Lawrence Miller, rookie right-hander, for the first seven innings.

THREE INFIELD HITS.

They were able to get only three infield hits for the first five innings and got their first runner to third base in the sixth.

The Lookouts began levelling on Miller in the eighth and really teed off in the ninth. Bill Beckman came to the rescue with the bases loaded and only one man out and choked the rally dead.

Those erstwhile Vicious Vols came to town today after their terrible experience at Knoxville. Bobby Durham will pitch for the Crackers. The game begins at 4 o'clock.

The Crackers, incidentally, have been carrying the boys at a fast clip here of late. They have won luck next time. He had not meant for anyone to know, but the chambermaid was not one to let her gratitude be hidden.

"Gee," she said, "that's good of you. Perhaps you are nuts—never knew a bookmaker to do such a thing." Then she looked at the bill and shrieked: "My Gawd, it's a fiver. You must've made a mistake."

"To bet on other races," said Duke. Then to the boys: "Don't want to play any favorites today. Did you lose, too?"

They shook their heads. It was hard to be honest sometimes but they couldn't take advantage of a man as square as this bookie.

"You've six thousand coming to you, Madison," said Duke.

"That's not all. I haven't had such a good time in I don't know when. Our friend who bet on King's Jester said I was crazy—I think I was to stay away from the races so long. Believe me, it won't happen again. What do you say to that?"

chambermaid right? Had his employer gone completely crazy? Duke was holding his breath now. This was the crucial moment. He knew that Madison had a fortune in United Copper. He knew he was a good businessman. Even a sucker would think of something besides a race at this moment.

"Mr. Madison, please"—the secretary was pleading now.

"I'm too busy just now, to listen," said Madison. "There've been breaks before and we've—that's right, Stardust! Keep up the good work."

Bacwell spoke again, but this

"Where's Tony Boy?" he asked.

Duke, who had grown tense, relaxed. United Copper would have to wait. He was looking toward the door which Boswell had left open, when he came in. In it stood a waiter and a bellhop, listening. He waved to them to come in.

"Into the stretch, neck and neck —" the announcer's voice came — "Stardust and King's Jester."

"Pay no attention, Stardust," yelled Madison. "Stretch your neck, Stardust!"

Then there was silence in the

"There are many things I could say," said Duke, in all truthfulness, "but the way I see it is, if a man, woman either, can afford it, what better way is there of amusing himself? It's relaxation, too, in a way. You'll go back to your work—to this United Copper problem right now—better able to cope with it because you've forgotten everything for a little while which has to do with breaks in the market and prices going up or down. If one can't afford to bet, that's a different matter altogether. I'll always want to bet now

"When do you plan to stop?" asked Madison.

"When I have made my pile," said Duke firmly.

"And that will be—"

Duke laughed.

"Well, that depends. Here you do me in the first thing. I'll just have to wait until I get hold of a rich sucker. And then—"

"Good luck to you," said Madison. "You're a good guy and I hope you get your pile and everything else right away, or a little sooner. I'm sorry about winning

TARZAN'S QUEST No. 45

With a solemn warning to Muir to that he might never return, Tarzan moved into the clearing, followed by Brown. Neither man spoke; their desperate plan had been too well formulated to require speech. So, in silence, they reached the grounded airplane.

While Tarzan was busy over the slain aviators, Brown inspected the cockpit and the baggage compartments. "Plenty ammunition," he said, handing his companion a box of cartridges. "That's about all you can manage—you ain't got no peck-ets. I'm loaded down."

"How about petrol?" Tarzan asked. "Not much more's a hatful," the American replied. "It'll do if it don't take too long to warm up." Now Tarzan handed Brown a parachute he had taken from one of the dead fliers; the other "chute he adjusted to his own body.

The two men climbed into the plane. "Here's hoping," Brown prayed under his breath as he opened the valve of the air starter. The answering whirr of the propeller brought a smile to his lips. But the dangerous take-off from the rock-strewn plain was still ahead!

EAST POINT NATIVE

SUICIDE IN FLORIDA

Forrest Bryant, Coast Guardsman, Accused of Wounding Woman.

Bryant, who enlisted in the coast guard two and a half years ago, wounded Mrs. Ouida Gibbons as they sat in a car in front of her parents' home. She was wounded in the chest and stomach and was reported "with little chance to survive" at Oakland Park hospital last night.

Bryant, who attended Russell High school, died before an ambulance reached a hospital. He was a member of the crew of the coast guard cutter Vigilant and had been stationed at Fort Pierce since he enlisted.

The shooting was reported to have followed a quarrel. A jury returned a verdict of suicide yesterday.

Bryant is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bryant; three sisters, Mrs. Marie Gresham, Mrs. W. J. McConnell and Miss Doris Bryant; three brothers, J. C. Bryant Jr., Fain and Robert Ray Bryant; his grandmother, Mrs. P. A. Fain, and niece, Miss Dorothy McConnell.

Funeral plans will be announced by Howard L. Carmichael.

LIQUOR CAR, OCCUPANT NABBED AFTER CHASE

One of two men who ran from a car in which police reported finding 20 gallons of corn liquor was captured at about 9:30 o'clock last night by Detectives R. R. Davis and J. A. Bailey.

The man identified himself as John O'Kelly, 29, of Cleveland, Ga. He was charged with violating state prohibition laws. The detectives spotted the car on Fort street and pursued it to Fort street and Edgewood avenue.

MAN, TIRED OF LIVING, NEAR DEATH AT GRADY

Badly wounded in the left side of the chest with bird shot, a man listed as Gus McKenzie, 34, of Swanee, Ga., was admitted to Grady hospital in critical condition early yesterday afternoon.

Patrolman Eddie Hughes, attached to the hospital, reported the wounded man told him he shot himself because he was "tired of living."

Mad Head-Hunter

Slays Two Children

MANILA, June 6.—(P)—The maniacal head-hunter, Kalanga Boli, hacked two children to death today, bringing to 13 the number he has killed and to 20 the total death count attributable to his savagery.

Keeping far ahead of pursuing constabularymen, the crazed descendant of fierce head-hunting tribesmen crept upon the children in the village of Futul. He wielded a head-axe, the same instrument he has used throughout his murderous campaign.

AGNES SCOTT FEE

TO BE HELD TODAY

Class Day Exercises To Start at 4 O'Clock in Dell.
